Gov't Halts Cass-Beggs' Pension

Pension plans of $10,000 a year for life arranged by the NDP for two former B.C. Hydro executives have been suspended by the Social Credit government.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said pension schemes established for former Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs and former executive director Jim Wilson are being studied by the government and will be suspended until a decision has been made.

An order to suspend payment on the pensions which began from the time the men left Hydro, went out "a few days ago," Gardom said.

Other contracts with pension agreements, arranged by the former government, are also being looked at by the new government, he said.

He would not elaborate any further on those contracts except to say they are beyond arrangements made within the public service.

The pensions were financed entirely by Hydro and go to the executive's wives if the men predecease them.

Cass-Beggs left Hydro last year and Wilson's employment was terminated by the Socred's last month so both men are receiving their pensions.

Former Resources Minister Bob Williams, who was a Hydro director under the NDP, said the pensions are "certainly higher than any average-Joe situation" but are not unusual for a corporation the size of Hydro.

Asked if it was a secret pension scheme, Williams said the order-in-council appointing the men in the fall of 1972 stipulated that pension plans would be arranged.

Cass-Beggs officially took over as chairman Jan. 1, 1973, and Wilson joined Hydro the same day but became executive director May 1, 1973. Their salaries were $48,000 and $38,000 respectively.

The pension schemes were formally drawn up in February, 1975, and terms of the agreements make them irrevocable.

Asked about other pension schemes at Hydro, Williams said there were some similar arrangements made when Hydro first started for executives who would not have normally received good pensions through regular channels.

Cass-Beggs is already at retirement age and Williams said Wilson is in his "mid-50s".

Hydro chairman Bob Bonner described the pension arrangements as "unique" but said he wouldn't want to attach any other adjectives in his comments.

He said such schemes are not unusual in private business but these plans would probably be "exceptional" even in the private sector.

The contracts are fully entered into, he said, and he has no grounds to change them.

Trusts were set up last year from which the pensions are to be drawn.

Bennett's TV Speech Set Friday

Premier Bennett's state of the province message has now been tentatively scheduled for Friday evening.

Bennett's aides said the studios of BCTV in Vancouver have been reserved Friday afternoon for taping of the 15-minute message.

It will be shown at 6:30 p.m. on BCTV and likely again at 7 p.m. on CBC.

The address has an "on-again, off-again" history. It was originally scheduled Monday, then changed to Thursday.

Aides say it is unlikely that the date will be changed again since the Clarkson Gordon financial review should be prepared by that time. The auditors' report was originally to be the basis of the address but has since been played down. Bennett said it will now be only a minor part of his speech.

A producer may be hired by the government to help package the address.

It appears the premier will not be available for comment on his speech until three days later.

'Reluctant' Approval For New Hospital Site

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Health Minister Bob McClelland has "reluctantly" agreed to purchase of a 25-acre site near Douglas and McKenzie for a new hospital and regional planners have asked him to expropriate the land.

But McClelland says that if the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission is determined on that site, he won't support provincial cost-sharing beyond $1.25-million, half the price the owners want and the region says the land is worth.

That would mean ratepayers in the Capital district could have to pay substantially more to finance the purchase.

The commission has countered by asking for provincial government expropriation of the property. This would lead to an independent board setting a fair market value, one the commission says the province and region could then share on the customary 60-40 formula.

The site lies northeast of the McKenzie-Douglas intersection on sloping land now within the Agricultural Land Reserve but surrounded by residential development and within the Saanich sewer enterprise.

Settling on a site for the planned acute care hospital, initially to have 300 beds, is a key planning decision which is currently delaying a number of other hospital plans.

The commission released copies of the letters today. McClelland is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

In his letter, the health minister repeated his concern about the cost of the property, earlier put at about $2.5 million by the region.

"I do not believe that I should encourage you to proceed with this proposed site acquisition at what appears to be an unreasonable price during this difficult period of financial restraint," he says in part.

But he adds:

"In the event that your commision insists you are so deeply 'locked into' the McKenzie-Douglas site that you feel you cannot change your recommendation, I reluctantly make the following proposal.

"I would be prepared to recommend the usual government sharing of 60 per cent of a maximum amount of $1,250,000 . . .

"At the equivalent of $50,000 per acre, this is more than three times the appraised value and the price paid by the present owners.

"This proposal would involve negotiations with the owners in order to try to persuade them to accept a substantially lower price since any costs in excess of $1,250,000 would be 100 per cent the responsibility of your Regional Hospital District."

In his reply, Wallace said the commission felt obliged to review in detail its list of potential hospital sites in the district and has concluded again that the McKenzie-Douglas site is the best one for the new hospital.

Having settled that at a special meeting last week, "we now take this opportunity of making you aware of the commission's completely positive support of the McKenzie-Douglas site (and) request that you take appropriate action to expropriate this property at a fair and equitable price so that both the province and the region can share the capital cost on the usual 60-40 basis . . ."

Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board and a member of the commission, said today the commission is pleased with McClelland's positive approach, even though there is disagreement on the question of the land's value.

"We also believe the price is too high and the only way to resolve it now is ask the government to exprorpriate the land for a hospital site."

The difference in price turns on different appraisals conducted by province and region.

B.C. Pleads On Pulp Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams has asked Jean-Luc Pepin, Anti-Inflation Board chairman, not to roll back the pulp and paper settlement in British Columbia even though it exceeds federal guidelines.

Contents of a telegram sent Jan. 29 were made public Monday.

Williams told Pepin that "any action which would undo the results of this bargaining (in the pulp industry) would have most serious and far-reaching implications."

He said: "From the perspective of the government and the public interest it is imperative that industrial strife be reduced in this most important industry . . . I believe it would be in the public interest therefore if the most favorable consideration could be given to the submissions presented to you by management and labor on this settlement."

The industry and the two pulp unions — the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) — are awaiting a decision from the board that will not likely be made before next week.

The settlement in B.C. is for 16.1 per cent in the first year and 10.9 per cent in the second year, based on the calculation formula required by the Anti-Inflation Board.

Art Gruntman, CPU spokesman, said Williams' telegram was no surprise because "it is in his interest to try and get the thing settled."

Paris Recognizes MPLA Gov't

Times News Services

France today recognized the government of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA), the French foreign ministry announced.

France is the first major Western country to recognize the Luanda government of Dr. Agostinho Neto.

A foreign ministry statement said: "The French government, in conformity with its normal practice regarding the recognition of states and considering that the Luanda government today exercises authority over most of the territory, recognizes the Popular Republic of Angola."

The French decision came after it consulted with its eight European EconomicCommunity (EEC) partners on the issue.

The five Nordic countries, including EEC-member Denmark, were expected to recognize the MPLA administration Wednesday.

Luanda radio, broadcasting from the Marxist-controlled capital, said Monday the MPLA has captured the northern town of Sao Salvador, last key base of the pro-western National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

"The entire northern border (is) coming progressively under our control . . . On the southern front, the situation continues to develop in favor of the Liberation forces," the broadcast said.

The radio said a number of unidentified foreign mercenaries died in the battle for Sao Salvador, about 40 miles south of the Zaire border.

The Popular Movement's victories last week gained it recognition by the 46-member organization of African unity, followed by membership in the all-African body.

Big Fine Urged For Ouellet

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown has asked Quebec Court of Appeal to impose a "substantial fine" or a three-month prison term on federal Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet for his conviction last month on a charge of contempt of court.

Richard Holden, special prosecutor in the minister's trial, filed a motion with the appeal court Monday, asking for the fine and calling for the prison term if the fine is not paid.

Ouellet was convicted of contempt of court for comments he made Dec. 19, about Justice Kenneth Mackay's acquittal of three large sugar companies on charges of price-fixing.

He has appealed both the sentence and the verdict.

Mr. Justice James Hugessen sentenced the minister in Superior Court Jan. 23, to make full apology to the court, to Mr. Justice Mackay and to the Canadian people.

B.C. Hydro Lays Off 300; Slashes $100M Spending

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro has cut almost $100 million from its planned capital expenditures for next year, and has laid off 300 temporary employees, chairman Robert Bonner said Monday, in a letter to employees and in an interview.

Bonner said the company was faced with a loss of $35 million and was attempting to fight mounting costs and financial losses with the move. He also said consideration of increased rates for electric, gas and transit service will begin soon.

He said the $35-million deficit was expected by the end of the current fiscal year ending March 31, and "if costs are not brought under control, and if revenues are not increased, we are facing a doubled deficit by the end of the next fiscal year at March 31, 1977."

The letter to Hydro employees said: "Our first priority, therefore, must be to reduce operating and capital costs substantially without reducing the reliability and quality of service to our customers. To do so, we are examining all capital projects in detail to determine the feasibility of deferring projects and, at the same time, we are studying all opportunities to reduce operating costs by modifying or cancelling functions which are discretionary."

Bonner said cost control was the first problem to be solved because "there is a limit . . . to what the public should be asked to bear" in restoring Hydro's financial health.

He said it is possible the company will lose money on its gas and electrical operations. Previously, it had been expected that the loss would result only from the expanded transit services in Vancouver and Victoria.

"We are within days of rate making (for services) because we have to determine our position in order to shape the next fiscal year," said Bonner.

Trident Tripled?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Douglass, a member of the Pacific Life Community, a Vancouver-based anti-Trident group, said Monday the United States has decided to triple the number of Trident nuclear submarines to operate out of Bangor, Wash.

He said the fleet will have destructive power of more than 12,000 nuclear warheads. The base being built at Bangor is about 100 miles south of Vancouver.

"For political and budgetary reasons, they haven't revealed the true size of the Trident fleet now," said Douglass.

MP Urges New Food Freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — A New Democratic Party MP called Monday for a freeze on retail food prices until the government has investigated a report that food prices are higher than necessary due to declining competition among supermarket chains.

Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville) made the proposal following publication of details of a food prices review board study which said Canadians are paying an average of four per cent too much for food because of falling competition.

Earlier, a spokesman for the food prices review board — which was absorbed by the anti-inflation board last October 8 said the findings of the study are "highly suspect."

James McGrath (PC — St. John's East) also called for an investigation and said the Commons should instruct the anti-inflation board to roll back prices if the report is found to be correct.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told McGrath that the anti-inflation board will pay close attention to the gross profits of supermarkets in monitoring their pricing policies under the pay and price controls program.

He also said the government will introduce "at an early date" the planned competition legislation dealing with monopolies and mergers.

McGrath said the findings of the study commissioned by the now-defunct food prices review board are seriously undermining the anti-inflation program.

Earlier, food board secretary Anthony Campbell said the study — done by Montreal marketing expert Bruce Mallen at a cost of $25,000 — attributes 3.2 per cent of unnecessary food costs to excess capacity in supermarkets.

IT'S AN ECONOMY DRIVE

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal energy department spent about $20,000 today, hoping to show Canadians they can save money and energy by driving smaller and lighter cars.

To make its point, the department sent three 1976 cars — weighing 2,400, 3,600 and 4,800 pounds respectively — on the 120-mile trip to Montreal with only four gallons of gasoline each.

A spokesman said the results of the trip, which began on Parliament Hill, will be condensed to a one-minute television commercial urging Canadians to drive smaller cars.

"Because the National Film Board is doing the commercial it will cost only about $20,000, which is about half the normal cost," he said.

He said experts predicts that the heaviest car will run out of gasoline before it reaches the Ontario-Quebec border — about 65 miles, that the medium-weight car will make it to Montreal Island — about 110 miles, and the smallest and lightest car will breeze through Montreal.

90-YEAR TERM IN 40 MONTHS

A 23-year-old Victoria area man can be thankful for the word "concurrent."

Donald Robert Steele of no fixed address was sentenced Monday in Victoria provincial court by Judge F. S. Green to a total of 89 years and 10 months in prison for 42 separate crimes.

Because Green made all 42 sentences concurrent, Steele will have to serve a maximum only of the longest — 40 months.

Steele had pleaded guilty to 13 charges from Victoria, Saanich, Courtenay, Campbell River, Vancouver and West Vancouver, dated from Nov. 24, 1975, to Feb. 6 of this year and containing 37 counts of false pretences, three of possession of known stolen proeprty and one each of break-in and theft and obtaining lodgings by fraud.

The total of goods, cash and services invovled in the 42 counts was more than $5,190.

Loan Sharks Gov't Target

TORONTO (CP) — The federal government will take action against loan sharking in Canada, Andre Ouellet, federal consumer affairs minister, said Monday.

Ouellet said following a federal-provincial conference of consumer and corporate affairs ministers that there was a consensus at the meeting that something must be done to curb loan sharking.

He said police now believe loan sharks rake in up to $5 billion a year by lending money at huge interest rates.

The conference was called to discuss the possibility of updating the federal interest act, pawnbrokers act and small loans act under a new bill — the borrowers' and depositers' protection act.

Monday's session was a continuation of a conference held in Ottawa early last December.

Ouellet said the federal government wants to introduce legislation that will protect borrowers. Conference representatives decided that Ottawa has the tools and mechanisms to fight loan sharking, he added.

The minister said there was disagreement by some provincial representatives as to disclosure of contracts. Some provinces already have protective legislation.

A committee of deputy ministers was appointed to examine this area.

Ouellet said representatives also discussed the great need for small loans to low-income borrowers at a good interest rate.

Charges Reduced

NANAIMO (CP) — Three of five men originally charged with rape in the beating assault of two women were fined $500 Monday when they pleaded guilty to a reduced charge of assault causing bodily harm to one of the women. Shinda Singh Dhaliwal, 23, Manjit Singh Mahal, 21, and Ejmer Singh Dodd, 23, all of Nanaimo, were placed on one-year probation. Charges against Karnail Singh Dhasi and Agaib Dhalwal, both of Nanaimo, were withdrawn by the Crown.

YOUTH, 16, CHARGED IN SILVER $ THEFT

A 16-year-old boy was to appear in Victoria Family Court today charged with breaking into a Central Saanich home Feb. 7 and stealing $500 in silver dollars.

Central Saanich police chief Bob Miles said the juvenile was arrested in Victoria last Thursday and has been held in custody since. An application to raise the juvenile to adult court is expected.

The boy is charged with breaking into the residence of Ellis Keith, 818 Delamere Road. The house was ransacked and a bank bag containing 500 silver dollars taken.

Miles said police have recovered $100 in paper currency and eight silver dollars. Another 150 silver dollars have been located in a Victoria bank.

Export Levy Concern

Premier Bennett and western region International Woodworkers of America president Jack Munro held "wide-ranging discussions" Monday on problems facing B.C.

According to a statement issued from Bennett's office, the most immediate concern of the two men was the federal government's proposed export levy, which Bennett said both men felt "would be disastrous for B.C. and Canada as a whole."

The federal anti-inflation program in general and possible improvements to the scheme were also discussed at the meeting.

Munro has been vocal in his attacks on ICBC rate increases established by the Social Credit goveernment.

Further Cuts Expected On Iran Oil

RIYADH (WP) — Sheikh Ahmad Zaki Yamani, Saudi Arabian petroleum minister, Monday predicted a further Iranian oil price slash, accused Iran of undercutting producer cartel-agreed prices and revealed a planned shutdown of two Saudi oilfields.

But in an interview, Yamani insisted that the effect of these measures — reflecting decreased worldwide consumption because of the recession — on the 13-nation organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries (OPEC) would not be "as much as pictured in the Western press."

Nonetheless, he acknowledged that the Iranian price reduction announced Sunday night marked the first time that the OPEC cartel had failed to force consumers to accept its unilaterally imposed price increases in their entirety.

Only last September, OPEC announced a 10-per-cent increase for Saudi Arabian light crude — known as the marker or yardstick for pricing all other varieties of oil.

Fingering a string of beads, Yamani said Iran's decision to shave 9.5 cents from every barrel of Iranian heavy crude was "something we expected and can live with."

Moreover, he said, "even the present price of Iranian heavy crude — now $11.40 a barrel — "is higher than it should be" and he doubted iran could" avoid a further price reduction. Industry sources here speculated that Iran could avoid a further ther dime a barrel to sell the 740,00 barrels a day shortfall Teheran officials have mentioned recently.

More Study Sought On Water

North Saanich council has referred the Saanich peninsula water report for further study.

But the move Monday was opposed by Mayor Paul Grieve, who wanted council to at least go on record in favor of a single board to take responsibility for the water supply on the peninsula, in place of the present seven water boards.

Ald. George Westwood said council should wait before taking any action.

He argued that even a commitment to amalgamate in principle would be premature.

"In my way of thinking, this is the type of resolution we would be moving right now," replied the mayor. "It seems bizarre that we all support and run for election on the basis of providing water for this area. But when a report such as this is received, we won't do anything about it."

No Court In Sidney?

Sidney council has had "every indication" from the provincial government that court facilities will not be returned to the town, Sidney Mayor Peter Malcolm said today.

Malcolm said council has heard that the government will not renew its lease on courtroom facilities, which is up at the end of February and "that sort of tells us that the court is not coming back."

"They (the provincial government) have been really good at not making a decision on the matter," he said.

The provincial court was moved from Sidney to Victoria early in 1974 and the town was told its facilities were inadequate, but that if the facilities were improved the court might be returned.

An addition to Sidney's town hall, with one floor reserved for a courtroom, is almost finished, but it looks like the courtroom will have to be put to another use, Malcolm said.

A spokesman in Attorney-General Garde Gardom's office said a decision on the Sidney court facilities would not be made for some time.

IRA Blasts Huge Store

BELFAST (UPI) — The Irish Republican Army blew up a department store in downtown Belfast today in its violent campaign to avenge the death of IRA hunger striker Frank Stagg.

Police said three gunmen entered the building on Donegal Street in the fenced-off city centre, planted a bomb among the paint and oil of the hardware department, and fled.

The three-storey building was evacuated before the bomb went off 30 minutes later. The blast collapsed the first floor and touched off a small fire.

Iceland General Strike

REYKJAVIK (Reuter) — Icelandic labor unions began an indefinite general strike today aimed at bringing the country — but not its "cod war" patrol boats — to a standstill.

The strike, which began at midnight Monday night, threatens to paralyse communications and close shops and factories. But the unions have pledged full support for the Icelandic coast guard in the fisheries dispute with Britain.

IT'S FREE VOTE ON NOOSE—PM

Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Prime Minister Trudeau has told Liberal MPs they are free to vote against the government's bill to abolish capital punishment because the government risks being defeated on the issue anyway.

In a letter for the guidance of Liberal backbenchers, the prime minister said it would be "undesirable" for the government to be defeated on the capital punishment issue.

The letter indicates that Trudeau believes members of the government party would cross party lines and help defeat the abolition bill even if "the whips were on," — a term signifying that MPs are expected to vote the party line.

The prime minister wrote the letter in reply to one from Harold Herbert (Lib. — Vaudreuil) expressing the concern of a number of government backbenchers as to how they should vote on the bill. His answer was to be circulated among the worried MPs.

Because it is a government bill, cabinet ministers are being expected to vote for it, according to Solicitor General Warren Allmand, although it will be a "free vote" for other MPs on the Liberal side. The bill is being introduced next Tuesday.

Herbert said that if "the whips were on" he would vote to support the bill, but that if not, he would vote for retention of capital punishment because most of his constituents are retentionists.

Vodka Bout—And Ivan Loses

LONDON (AP) — The assistant air attache at the Soviet embassy in London was taken to a police station during the weekend following a drinking bout with a British army sergeant, police said Monday.

One newspaper said the attache was asking questions about mercenaries in Angola and was so drunk he fell off his bar stool.

The Foreign Office declined comment, and a Soviet embassy spokesman said: "I cannot believe this monstrous story."

Capt. Valentin Vladimirovitch was taken in for questioning Saturday night, but later was released without being charged, claiming diplomatic immunity. He and the sergeant had been drinking at the Radnor Arms tavern in the fashionable Kensington section of London.

Scotland Yard gave no details, but The Evening News quoted bar manager Joe McNally as saying Vladimirovitch was so drunk he fell off his bar stool. The newspaper also said the diplomat ripped up his sweater and shirt in a rage when he was taken to the police station.

McNally was quoted as saying Vladimirovitch entered the bar and sat beside the army sergeant, bought him seven vodkas, downed several himself, then began questining the soldier about British mercenaries in Angola.

"It was like a scene from a spy movie," McNally said. "The Russian showed no finesse at all about the approach he made."

The sergeant became suspicious and slipped out to call police, the newspaper said.

McNally said that when two detectives arrived, the Russian was so drunk he could not stand and fought with one of the officers.

"He tried to run away, but he was so drunk he fell down," he said.

Secretaries Meeting

The National Secretaries' Association program-of-the-year meeting will be held Wednesday, Feb. 18, at 5:30 p.m. at the Strathcona Hotel.

"The Humanities" is this year's international topic and the Victoria branch's program is entitled Have We Found Atlantis? presented by Dr. Gordon Shrimpton, University of Victoria classics department.

The "Humanities" theme is designed to offer secretaries the opportunity to balance the practical concerns of everyday living with an appreciation of the insights and sensiblities of others.

NDP TO DISCUSS BARRETT FUTURE

The future of Dave Barrett and his leadership of the NDP will be discussed Friday at a NDP caucus meeting in Victoria.

Barrett returned from a three-week holiday in Mexico and California last weekend and was at work Monday in the NDP offices.

He had no comment on his future until he meets with the caucus. Decision on a B.C. Supreme Court appeal of the election in Coquitlam is expected by Wednesday, he said.

At this point, Social Credit candidate George Kerster is ahead in the constituency by a narrow margin.

If the appeal confirm's Barrett's loss, he and the party will have to decide whether he will step out of politics and leave the party leadership open, or whether an NDP MLA should step down so he could run in a by-election.

Rock Hurled At Car

A Victoria woman and her three children narrowly escaped serious harm Sunday after a fist sized rock was hurled through the window of a car they were travelling in on West Saanich Road near Royal Oak.

Mrs. Darlene Burry of 7 Heywood Heights said the rock shattered the rear passenger window on the left side and landed on her 11-year-old daughter Patricia's lap. The girl was showered with glass fragments and became hysterical.

Neither Mrs. Burry nor her other two children, Glenn, 15, and Sherri, 9, were hurt.

Mrs. Burry said she stopped the car and Glenn jumped out to try to find the rock-thrower, without success.

"If the rock had hit me I definitely would not be here to tell the story," she said. "I'm still so upset I want something done. Maybe somebody might die next time."

She said a woman resident in the area told her she heard boys "laughing as they ran past her house."

Saanich police said the problem has occurred before but the culprits have not been found.

Saanich Seeks Stiffer Juvenile Penalties

Saanich will ask Attorney-General Garde Gardom for stiffer penalties for juvenile delinquents and their parents.

Disturbed at the increase in crime among juveniles in Saanich, the council agreed Monday to write to Gardom.

"Parents should be responsible to make some restitution," said Ald. Fred Severson, "We must have some meaningful type of action."

This year's proposed police budget is $3,037,900, representing an increase of $618,500 or more than 25 per cent than in 1975.

Lum said one of the main causes for the increase is the spiralling of crime among juveniles.

"The chief wanted an extra 12 men," he told council, "But the (police) board modified that to six, which will get us by this year."

Lum said this year's crime-prevention program for schools and communities was introduced in an effort to reduce the number of juvenile lawbreakers.

He said the police board had met with the provincial police commission, who also agreed parents should bear more responsibility for crimes of their children.

Lum said provincial court procedures also added to the high cost of police services that must be paid by taxpayers.

"Sometimes we have as many as six men tied up (in court) who must be paid overtime," Lum said, "They sit around and the hearing is often remanded. There has to be a little more tightening up in the provincial court area."

Lum said cuts have already been made in the police budget but the council decided to meet with the police board Feb. 26 before giving approval. The delay was made to allow council to compare costs of police services in 1975 with the proposed cost for 1976.

Dairy Foundation Elects Pendray

John Pendray, well-known dairy farmer in the Victoria area, has been elected president of the British Columbia Dairy Foundation. He succeeds J. H. Argue, vice-president and general manager of Foremost Foods Ltd., Vancouver.

Other officers elected were: Henry Wiens, vice-president, general manager of NOCA Dairies, Vernon, and W. J. Aird, secretary-treasurer, marketing manager of Fraser Valley Milk Producers Association, Burnaby.

Saanich Yields To Save Library

Saanich council made a "major" compromise on Monday to save the Greater Victoria public library system.

On the urging of Mayor Ed Lum, the council agreed to accept the library board's latest cost-sharing formula in a bid to remove city opposition to library regionalization.

The library board is trying to get a much larger grant from the provincial government but has to regionalize to qualify. Victoria, up until now, has balked at a cost-sharing formula set by the Library Development Commission, based on school assessment.

The newest formula, presented by the board, is based on general assessment and population.

"There has to be a major compromise on our part to save the Greater Victoria public library from breaking up," Lum warned council.

Not every alderman agreed with him.

"I think we should stick pretty tough on this," said Ald. Roy Wootten, who with Ald. Mary Casilio voted against approving the new formula.

The new formula sets a base payment for each of the four core municipalities; any surplus realized after the provincial grant is received being divided on the general assessment and population quotas.

Lum said the city's rejection of the school assessment formula was ill-founded because, using either formula, in the long run Saanich will pay the lion's share.

"Our assessment will grow as our population rises," he told council.

The increased provincial grant will save Saanich alone $100,000 but the plan vetoed by the city would have gained Saanich $140,000, with the city paying only a few hundred dollars more, Lum observed.

But the library's regionalization woes are still not over.

The other participating municipalities must also approve the latest formula and, more importantly, so must the Library Development Commission.

Saanich To Buy Jaws of Life

Saanich will get the Jaws of Life.

It's no movie but car-cutting equipment, similar to equipment purchased by Victoria in mid-1975.

Since that time Saanich's fire department has borrowed the city's Jaws of Life five times to free trapped accident victims.

Fire Chief Harold Gains said while his department appreciates being able to borrow the equipment "there is a certain time delay which could well cost a life either by a fire breaking out in the vehicle or the loss of blood over a period of time."

Ald. Fred Severson, a city firefighter, recommended that Saanich also buy its own cutting tips for Jaws of Life immediately to save wear and tear on the city's.

He said the city's life department is prepared to train their Saanich counterparts in the use of the equipment.

"It (Jaws of Life) is required more in Saanich because of the high accident rate and the highway," Severson said.

The equipment will cost $8,000, half of the amount being provided by the Provincial Emergency Program.

Victoria Times

TUESDAY, FEBRUARY 17, 1976

GORDON BELL, Managing Editor — STUART UNDERHILL, Publisher — GEORGE OAKE, Editor

Stranger in the House

The photograph accompanying this editorial shows a Victoria police officer leaning out of a second storey window in the legislative buildings taking pictures of people demonstrating against automobile insurance increases. Last Saturday, the same picture appeared on page two of the Times beside a headline that read Why The Crime Czars Remain Untouchable. The juxtaposition of the unrelated headline and photo contain a lot of unconscious irony though.

What right does any police force have to take pictures of peaceful demonstrators on the legislative lawns? These people have committed no crimes. Nor are they political subversives, unless the Victoria police department in its infinite wisdom considers membership in the B.C. Federation of Labor subversive. Just as galling is the apparent acquiescence of the provincial government in letting this officer use the legislative building — the seat of parliamentary democracy in this province — to spy on peaceful citizens. Is this indicative of the new regime's style?

Contacted by a Times reporter, Deputy Chief Les Mottershead said the photographs are "held for police purposes." What are these purposes? Are dossiers prepared on people when faces are matched with names? This kind of police spying on law abiding citizens is distasteful. In fact, it's disgusting.

Every legitimate press photographer and television camera man is also compromised by these spies, who turn up at almost every local demonstration. The function of the police is to protect the citizenry, not intimidate them. Chief Constable Jack Gregory owes the public, and the police commission, a full explanation when he returns from holidays. This stupidity has gone too far.

Tories Never Rest

As the Tories gird for leadership battles later this week it comes as a shock to learn exactly what mental space some of them still occupy in 1976. Last week several of them were growling that a new mid-winter holiday would damage the work ethic and encourage laziness. The comments were occasioned — apparently straight-faced — during third reading of a bill to establish national heritage day on the third Monday of February.

Sentiments similar to those expressed by the Conservative backbenchers are standard fare in the Senate where whoopee socks are still considered risque. But surely we can expect more in the Commons, even from Tories. From October until June much of outdoors Canada is uninhabitable. Nor is there as much as a day off between New Years' and Easter. We slave away in the northern gloom trying to remember bird songs and blossoms. Another statutory holiday — we have only 10 now — in this critical period would relieve tensions and ready us for the riot of spring.

While it is true that socialist countries such as the Soviet Union and China have only seven statutory holidays, most Catholic countries celebrate scores. A mere 11 holidays for Canada would seem a suitable compromise, in keeping with our mixed economy. One more day of rest in 365 is not going to crush what remains of the battered work ethic or encourage any more laziness than we now endure. If the Tories keep thinking in these terms, they may find every day a holiday after the next election. An idle mind couldn't stand it.

Nostalgia Food

It's reported that a new restaurant will open soon in the Gastown area of Vancouver. The owners of the establishment, which is to be called the Breadline, are spending some $350,000 to re-create the atmosphere of the great depression.

The restaurant is a franchise chain operation, copied from a successful one in Seattle, where all the staff are old age pensioners—average age 72 years. The Vancouver Breadline will also use retired people as waiters and waitresses.

We can see the next development in the nostalgia food business already. Solitary Confinement Unit—re-live the experiences of penitentiary life. Bread and water only. Or how about Immigration? Three weeks in the fo'c's'le of a pitching ship, water leaking in and no fresh air. Rations of hardtack and bully beef.

For your second course, move to the constantly rolling emigrants' train with its specially designed colonist car, potbelly stove at one end pumping out heat and strange smells from the pots cooking on top, screeching brake wheels. An eight day experience with a capital E! Now that's nostalgia.

Turner: A Man of Stature

OTTAWA — John Turner is a man of stature on the Canadian political scene, with a considerable international standing, yet no effort was made to dissuade him from leaving the cabinet nor, after that, from resigning his seat in the House of Commons.

The Turner affair, indeed, has been handled as if the Liberal party and the government were both so bursting with talent that the departure of one of its most important figures was of little consequence.

Turner's resignation in September produced far greater political shock waves than anyone, he himself included, foresaw. There was a clearly discernible wave of public sympathy and support for him and a corresponding feeling of antagonism towards the government he had just left. It was a highly unusual reaction to the resignation of a minister, even an important and popular one.

There is little real doubt that one of the main reasons why this country now lives under a prices and incomes control policy is to be found in those shock waves after Turner's resignation. Ironically, when he himself canvassed his cabinet colleagues and the Liberal caucus on the subject before his June budget he found no support for such a policy. Nor was it discernible then in the country.

Ceasefire

In effect, Turner's resignation and the unusual reaction to it made the policy of controls possible. But there are still so few signs that the program has been accepted by important segments of the community that as respected an economist as Carl Beigie of the C. D. Howe Research Institute in Montreal commented this week that "the program is now in very serious trouble, with criticism coming from all sides." Beigie felt driven to propose a ceasefire between government, business and labor and to suggest the terms which it might involve.

Far from being so strong and talent-filled that it could afford to ignore the Turner resignation, the cabinet this week has been going through a pitiful charade. The prime minister and a troop of ministers have been traipsing around British Columbia, pretending to be conducting serious business, in fact hoping that some political sleight-of-hand will stop the erosion of their popular support in the province. The erosion is serious enough that one British Columbia MP is quoted these days as saying that in an election now the party would lose more than half its eight seats in his province. Yet one of the places where Turner had had clear support for years, where his presence in a government is correspondingly helpful, is British Columbia.

Liberal party politics are acquiring an Alice-in-Wonderland quality.

The reality is that last week's Gallup poll showed that 42 per cent of the Canadian electorate does not know what party it would support if there were an early election. That is the largest undecided percentage that has ever shown up in this country — the ordinary percentage at this point between elections is 25 or 26. That big undecided vote is the real prize that will be at stake in next week's Conservative convention. When all the ideological arguments have taken place, the delegates will be thinking of it, because its size means that an effective Conservative leader probably can win the next election.

The undecided segment would not be so high if the electorate were satisfied with the Liberal government's performance and this capital is full of Liberals who are well aware of that. The size of the uncommitted segment is a sign of weakened confidence in the Trudeau administration and it will take a lot more than silly trips out to B.C. to restore it. One of the worst of the government's errors was the decision to launch the program of controls abruptly, after the party's effective opposition to that policy, with no attempt at all to build support for the switch in advance.

Turner's departure from the cabinet and the House of Commons is not the only example of this government's indifference to the loss of valuable men. Unnecessary resignations from the upper levels of the bureaucracy have also taken place, at a cost to the country. A bit more than a year ago, James Grandy and Simon Reisman resigned years before they would have reached the age of retirement. In the final few months before they left, their dissatisfactions had become so acute that it is improbable that they could have been persuaded to stay on. But they had given plenty of advance signs and a serious effort to deal with the developing problem in time would have kept two valuable men in the government's service. As to exactly how valuable, this comment was made a few days ago by an official who is probably one of the two or three most widely respected members of the bureaucracy:

"I would rather have Jim Grandy's judgment on a serious problem than that of any other man in Ottawa."

Men like these have gone and others will probably follow in a slow, costly trickle. There is little to be gained now, though, by dwelling on the losses that already have taken place.

Personal Friend

There are some other aspects to Turner's departure. His international standing is probably higher than that of any other Canadian since Lester Pearson. One of his last callers while he was still an MP was the ambassador of a European country. After Christmas he vacationed in Jamaica with the secretary of the U.S. treasury, William Simon. While he was there the finance ministers of France, Belgium and Germany came to call on him. Henry Kissinger came to dinner, although there is rivalry between the secretary of state and the secretary of the treasury.

I have, of course, been writing about a man with whom I developed a valued friendship. There was another aspect to that, however: Turner and I both took pride in the fact that in vital areas we maintained a very professional relationship. Once when I had been criticized as partial in something I had written about him I went back and re-read the critical columns. It did not seem to me that I had allowed personal regard to blunt my views and he certainly thought not.

Recurring Tory Nightmare

OTTAWA — The nightmare haunting the Conservative caucus in the House of Commons is the possibility that the party, as a result of the national convention, may pass under the command of a leader who is a stranger to the group.

How much credence should be attached to delegate surveys it is difficult to say. What they do not measure is the depth of commitments, an obviously important matter if the decision must wait on a good many ballots. At least, however, the results of various soundings have been sufficiently consistent to suggest to members that the campaign of Brian Mulroney has gained unexpected, and ominous, momentum. Mulroney has many assets but experience in elective office is not one of them.

Until 1927 the problems posed by the Mulroney candidacy would have been in conceivable. Prior to the Winnipeg convention that year, Conservative leaders had invariably been chosen by, the parliamentary caucus. Though incompatible with modern notions of party democracy, the old system had one clear advantage — the power of choice rested with those who lived with aspiring candidates in the House of Commons and, from that standpoint at least, were best qualified to assess their merits and demerits as potential leaders.

Need Caucus

The convention system undoubtedly widened the field of choice. On three occasions, popular conventions looking beyond the caucus entrusted Conservative fortunes to provincial premiers — John Bracken of Manitoba, George Drew of Ontario and most recently the Nova Scotian, Robert Stanfield. Twice the principal challenger was a former provincial cabinet Minister and once a premier (Duff Roblin).

In all these cases, however, the successful contender had powerful caucus support. As the party historian, Heath MacQuarrie, notes in his book, Bracken was the personal choice of Arthur Meighen, who mobilized support for him. Meighen was the most respected Conservative of his day and his influence on caucus was undoubtedly strong.

Drew's position was also favorable. He was a successful Ontario premier and particularly attractive to a caucus then overwhelmingly dominated by Ontario members (48 of 67).

Again in 1967, front-runner Robert Stanfield went into the convention with impressive backing from the federal caucus.

The present situation is radically different. It appears at this point that Mulroney's caucus support is negligible although his appeal to the party at large is impressive. First preferences of MPs are widely scattered. Not all of them are very strong. The fact that a member is committed, say, to Jack Horner on the first round, does not mean that he would be greatly distressed if the ultimate victor was Paul Hellyer or Sinclair Stevens. But the great m ajority seem to have one desire in common — the next leader, whoever he or she may be, should be one of their own, someone with caucus experience. This feeling is not only pervasive, it is strong enough in the case of some members to suggest that the advent of an outsider might have serious consequences for the party in parliament.

Dissension in the ranks is not new. It existed in Drew's time, it sparked open revolt in Diefenbaker's last years, it has been a continuing problem for Stanfield. If other parties follow leaders, the Conservative party endures them. At least, however most Conservatives are frank enough about the problem and the dangers it poses. The efforts to overcome it, in recent years if not always successful, have at least been serious and sustained.

But if this has been the situation until now, what will be the consequences if a stranger to parliament is, in effect, imposed on an unhappy caucus by the party at large? It is clear that they have already been the subject of anxious discussions in volving a sizeable number of MPs. The front line Conservatives, those who confront the governnment day by day, are plainly alarmed by what appears to be happening in party huddles across the country.

A leader without a seat in the House of Commons is at a heavy disadvantage. Meighen suffered for this reason in 1926 and again when he resumed the leadership during the war. The fact that Bracken failed to seek a parliamentary seat after winning the leadership may also have been costly in terms in public esteem.

A Mulroney victory would necessitate, as a first step, the naming of a House leader. It is no secret that Jed Baldwin, who served very skilfully under Stanfield, is not available. There will be a search presumably, for a compromise candidate, acceptable to the various party factions. But a house leader cannot have the prestige of a national leader. In the situation now being ruefully considered by MPs he would have to serve more or less as the personal ambassador to caucus of a commander outside parliament.

Grassroots

If an absentee leader is to replace a caretaker leader, his emergence will certainly not of itself restore unity. For having won the party, he will still have to face a caucus, at best uncertain, at worst hostile. The task of the Conservatives is to fashion themselves into a much more effective opposition. Their prospects will scarcely be improved if their energies over the next period must be concentrated on intra-party diplomacy.

The appeal of a fresh face, of a new figure in national politics, is not to be under estimated. But in difficult times, characterized by issues of great complexity, there is also a good deal to be said for experience. While it may appear that caucus members are out of line with the grassroots (some, apparently, rather influential roots), their concerns are not lightly to be dismissed. They are well placed to make judgments and share a particular interest in careful judgment. In the normal course we can expect an election in about two years. When it comes, their seats will be on the line.

Personal Polls

Re: Mrs. F. Elford's letter in your paper on Feb. 9 (Lower Standards), I very definitely agree with Mrs. Elford's views. If you wish to hold a public opinion poll, make it on a subject of depth and not a personal one i.e. Mrs. Trudeau, or anyone in the political field.

Your paper is read with interest, we have been subscribers for many years. — Mrs. G. W. Piercy, 2344 Beach Drive.

School Monster

I find it hard to believe that the school trustees who voted against closing Lampson, Bank Street and South Park schools are still sulking.

I do not want to believe that the less than two-thirds majority vote needed to pass the $46.8 million school budget was not forthcoming, and that the excuse of two of the trustees who voted against the budget was misunderstanding and lack of procedural knowledge. Pathetic.

May I make a suggestion, now that all the chest-puffing and drum-beating about holding the line on the budget has been thrown to the winds, that the board attempt to look at ways right now of keeping costs down for future years. As a start, let them follow the lead of the city of Victoria, and take a complete look at the overall administrative set-up. I am led to believe that we are creating an administrative monster at all levels in this district.

I am also sick of the board constantly referring to teacher cut-backs as the only way to pare the budget. Sure their salaries make a up a good percentage of the budget and should be held in check, but get off your backs now, and start lookong in the direction I have pointed. — Peter Yorke, (Unsuccessful School Trustee Candidate), 1187 Hewlett Place.

Clean Up

So the government has relented and in the face of protest done something to make it a bit easier for young drivers on auto insurance.

Their sensitivity is to be applauded. Are other groups just because they are weak, inexperienced, timid and lacking in leadership to be ignored? Does it have to be that only the squeaky wheel gets the oil?

I think there is need for more overall thought in planning in this and other areas of government policy making and implementation. I hope they will clean up the mess in Victoria.—Fed Up.

Manipulation

I am amazed at the ease with which the press can be manipulated. Take the latest furor over the Trudeaus. All it took was a song and the press were off and running. There may have been a song hidden in a bosom but I doubt it.

Trudeau could not have achieved all that publicity without the song. We can reflect on the Margaret Truman's song and be thankful that unlike Harry Truman. Trudeau did not go all the way and threaten to punch the newsmen in the nose.

From the Times of February 17, 1916

The British Columbia Liberal party last night selected Harlan C. Brewster as its candidate in the Victoria byelection by a unanimous vote of city Liberals. He made a speech before a large crowd which enlarged on the items in the party platform — land, transportation, timber, labor legislation, equal franchise and other matters. He said a Liberal government would appoint an impartial commission to investigate the Pacific Great Eastern railway, and startled those in attendance when he stated, on the authority of the chief engineer of the provincial railway department that it would cost not $6 million but $16 million to complete the PGE line to Fort George.

Far East Learns to Live with Lies and Spies

By DENNIS BLOODWORTH

SINGAPORE — An almost hysterical urge to strip away the last fig leaf from furtive politics is exposing the unattractive anatomies of the CIA and the KGB to the daylight — and to the clinical interest of Asian clients who have too often fallen for them in the dark.

The draft report of the Select Committee on Intelligence in Washington, which last week maintained that the CIA had tried to peddle fabricated "disinformation" to "foreign media assets" like Reuters news agency, rang true in this region.

Inside sources confirmed last year that undercover officers of the Agency disseminated "grey" and "black" propaganda to "witting" or "unwitting" journalists as part of its KUCAGE (psychological and paramilitary) operations throughout the world. But there is more to it than that, for the Far East has been particularly well irrigated by their labors, and the area flooded with even more lies than spies.

Accounts from the U.S. now reveal that at one time the Americans proved so sharp at the game that they metaphorically cut themselves. Faked stories of discontent in China and strained Sino-Soviet relations, put out by phoney CIA-sponsored radio stations purporting to be broadcasting clandestinely from inside the "People's Republic," were not only being picked up as genuine by the world's "unwitting" news media. They were sometimes taken seriously by "unwitting" planners in Washington, who were found to be recycling yesterday's trash from the Central Intelligence Agency for inclusion in their assessments for tomorrow's policy in the White House.

But the Americans were far from being pioneers in the field. The Chinese point out that the First Chief Directorate of the KGB deals energetically not only in fabricated news, documents, and rumor, but in all forms of malicious disclosure that can be damaging to an emeny. Talk — even truth — can destroy where a bomb cannot, and since the machinations of what are laughingly known as secret services now provide the fashionalbe explanation for most of the more malevolent ploys of mankind, many maintain that the recent brutal publicity given to CIA officers and agents by the local press in Paris, Rome and London may be traced to Department A "Dezinformatsiya" of the KGB in Moscow.

It is not forgotten in these waters that in 1969 Vitali Yevgennevich Lui alias Victor Louis sold the London Evening News a story that Russia was contemplating a pre-emptive nuclear strike against China, as part of a disinformation campaign to bring a hostile Peking to heel and to test American reactions. Five years earlier President Sukarno of Indonesia had been fed faked documentary evidence that the CIA was plotting his murder, and in 1968 a forged letter persuaded the Free Press Journal of Bombay to disclose that the U.S. Office of Naval Research had admitted the Pentagon was stockpiling bacteriological weapons in Vietnam — and The Times of London took up the sorry tale.

Today China is the main KGB target in Asia, and behind the workaday mud slinging that characterises overt relations between Moscow and Peking more subtle smear artists are at work. The "white" propaganda churned out by the Chinese and Soviet Press is admirably comprehensive in its coverage, but unmistakably propaganda. The bitching gets boring, and the world may well yawn when for the twentieth time the Chinese accuse the Russians of dividing revolutionary Africa by championing the MPLA in Angola, while the Russians accuse the Chinese of conniving at "imperialist" and "racist" policies by backing the rival Front for National Liberation.

But the world does not necessarily yawn when in January 1976 an "exclusive photo" of the FNLA leader in the company of a Chinese official appears in the local morning paper against the initials of a major international news agency. The picture is reproduced from a hostile Cuban magazine, there is no indication as to when it was taken, and Chinese aid to the FNLA ceased when the Organization for African Unity opposed all intervention in Angola in mid-1975. However, those objections will not outweigh a telling caption which speaks of "Chinese advisers" caught at a military camp in the company of Holden Roberto — "identified by the North American press itself as an agent of the CIA.

Meanwhile inspired stories begin to filter out of Moscow through other reputable Western sources alleging that Dr. Henry Kissinger himself persuaded the Chinese to befriend neighboring Zaire, and through Zaire tricked them into joining "imperialist" America and "racist" South Africa by supporting the enemies of the Soviet-backed "revolutionary" MPLA in Angola.

But responsible Asians who by now have read John Barron's KGB, or popular exposes of the organization in the vernacular press, merely retort that once again Department A in Moscow has overplayed its hand. China cultivates the United States primarily as a counterpoise to the USSR, and any lofty diplomatic sentiments exchanged between Peking and Washington ring like a cash-register rather than a clarion call. The Big Powers must balance, and so must the books.

Only in some carefully tailored Soviet script does Communist China trim its revolutionary policies in the Third World and allows itself to be pushed into a new confrontation with Russia simply to conform with the wishes of capitalist Washington — even given a handsome quid pro quo. And there has been none. The object of the Chinese is to use the Americans against the Russians — not to be used themselves,

"Disinformation" is not always a matter of mere words, however. The KGB also includes under this general heading judicious acts of murder or sabotage which will have a deleterious psychological effect on an adversary, and for these "wet affairs" will use any appropriate department within the organization, or agency outside it. So when the Malaysian inspector-general of police implied two weeks ago that a Russian-inspired "Marxist-Leninist" splinter group of the Communist Party of Malaya had assassinated his predecessor in order to drive a wedge between Kuala Lumpur and Peking (since most armed terrorists in Malysia are Maoists), accusing fingers were at once pointed at Moscow.

There is no proof that the First Chief Directorate of the KGB was even indirectly responsible for the deed, but such is the price of fame. When the hypothetical incognito of the CIA was broken in Western Europe, three French publications riposted by tearing the veils from the KGB in Paris, and Time Magazine pinpointed Luxembourg as a major base for secret Soviet operations.

KISSINGER
. . . tricked China

Fear of being fingered may already have claimed politically innocent victims. The thicket of troubles through which the Mosbert group of companies in Asia and Australia now finds itself stumbling was planted by its chief financial backer, the Moscow Narodny Bank when it demanded repayment of all loans by 11 a.m. on Dec. 5 last year. The MNB, which was established in London in 1919 by the Russian revolutionary government, is technically a British and not a Russian bank, and has no political record. Yet the well-informed Far Eastern Economic Review could be right when it suggests that its directors may have "panicked."

An English-language newsletter in Hong Kong had whispered that a massive loan which the MNB had granted to the Mosbert empire in excess of its total assets could be part of a secret Russian plot to infiltrate Hong Kong and finance intelligence operations against Peking. The local Chinese Communist Press also pointed out that the MNB had provided loans to other companies in the crown colony, and alleged in November that it was trying to buy up a bank in the neighboring Portuguese enclave of Macao for "subversive activities against China."

Who lives by disinformation may die by it. But it is a principle of intelligence that where good security is not enough to hide a secret, enemy eyes must be distracted by a deception. Blown to the winds, the CIA and the KGB might therefore do worse than put out more disinformation about themselves and less about others. Duplicity, as any child knows, begins at home.

Bergman Tax Scapegoat in Swedish Campaign

By COLIN NARBROUGH

BERGMAN . . . sop to unions

STOCKHOLM — When Swedish police arrested Ingmar Bergman, Sweden's leading film director, here Jan. 30 the event had all the marks of a corny melodrama. For many Swedes, however, it was seen as a serious threat to the rights of the individual in this Social-Democratic state.

Bursting into Stockholm's National Theatre, police and tax officers snatched Bergman in mid-rehearsal of Strindberg's Dance of Death, and bundled him off to a police station.

He was interrogated for five hours, his passport was confiscated, and he was obliged to make an undertaking not to leave the country. In the meantime police searched his flat and the house of the lawyer who looks after all his tax affairs.

Bergman stands accused of owing the Swedish revenue department half-a-million kroner (about $110,000) that he supposedly transferred to Switzerland in 1971, through a company in which he had interests. The statute of limitations on tax offences means that the tax office would have to write off the whole claim on him unless proceedings started by February 15. Press reports further claim that the Swiss company involved, designed to alleviate the burden of high taxation, has also been used by a number of other Swedish celebrities, including screen actor Max von Sydow.

Recently Bergman emerged the victor from an earlier clash with the tax department, over his 1969 income. He announced then that he was an artist, not a businessman, and that he has a lawyer to look after his tax affairs. Taxation laws here, as in most sophisticated industrial societies, are very complicated and for a man like Bergman with a multitude of international interests, a legal expert is essential. If Bergman's lawyer has misled him into committing an offence, it is up to the courts to decide the actual extent of Bergman's guilt. Why then, asked a number of leading Swedish newspapers, is it necessary to interrupt a man at work, haul him off to the police station, search his house and throw him to the press for judgment. Surely, they protested, this is not the way a Social Democratic State should treat its citizens, albeit the more privileged of them.

There could be more than coincidence in the timing of the Bergman snatch. It came the same day as Prime Minister Olof Palme told the Riksdagen (Parliament) that the ruling Social Democrats would not be including the provocative issue of workers' funds — a plan drawn up by the Trades Union Federation for directing company profits into union-controlled funds — in its campaign for the general elections here in September. It is not unlikely that the Social Democrats' "information" apparatus felt that a well-timed strike against some prominent public figure like Bergman would be an effective coup in the party's favour. After telling the unions they were not getting their workers' fund until the 1979 elections, the party's anti-capitalist image needed a boost.

That Bergman is a scapegoat of a larger pre-election campaign by the Social Democrats appears all the more likely as the party newspaper Aftonbladet (where the story originally broke) followed it up next day with a heavyweight lead article on the need to tax unearned income as severely as wages. Earlier last week charges were issued against a director of the Bonnier organization, a large printing house, for having channelled funds abroad illegally. There was also a lot of critical coverage about rich Swedes who bought holiday homes in sunny Spain. Added together these incidents easily outweighed Premier Palme's bad news for the unions, at least in terms of press coverage.

Apart from the possibility of a conspiracy against individual tax-dodgers, Sweden's high taxation is enough to make many wealthy (and even less than wealthy) people look for means of getting their kroner abroad. Industry also groans under the tax burden, and the government faces a flight of capital if taxation rises too quickly or if much needed capital finds it way into the workers' hands.

The Swedish Press and Palme protested vociferously over the shooting of anti-Franco guerrillas last year after summary trials, and, in more subdued tones, about reports of continued executions in the Soviet Union for economic crimes. The newspapers here would do well to look a little closer at what is taking place in Sweden itself, where the Social Democrats, in power for almost 50 years nonstop, are constantly stressing the vileness of tax evasion, even though the public at large has still to appreciate its basic immorality. And now there is the roughshod treatment of possible, though unconvicted, tax evaders like Bergman.

As punishment for crimes of violence become less severe in Sweden, and social attitudes soften towards all manner of deviants, the line on tax evasion gets tougher. Though capital punishment is out of the question in this part of the world, there is a definite possibility that jail sentences for tax offences will soon exceed those for crimes like rape and manslaughter.

Sweden's leaders have been striving towards a socialist goal for a long time. When they succeed in bringing the Swedish people around to their new vision of social justice, they will have won an important victory.

Meanwhile, just across the narrow sound in neighboring Denmark, a professional tax evader, Moegens Glistrup, leads the country's third largest political party. He is simultaneously engaged in a prolonged battle with the courts on tax evasion charges and recently said he expects to become the first Danish premier elected while in jail.

PERHAPS A ROLL IN THE HAY?

By GARY LAUTENS

According to the latest congressional report, the Central Intelligence Agency has been providing girls and stag movies to several unnamed foreign leaders.

Many Canadians find the news deeply disturbing.

"No wonder the Americans get the best secrets," one of my closest friends grumbled. "They're offering sex and porno films in exchange for classified information.

"How can we compete with that?

"When foreign leaders come to Ottawa, all the RCMP offers them is the musical ride. No wonder we're flops in the spy industry."

"I take it you don't think the Mounties can match the CIA when it comes to espionage," was my response.

"Put yourself in the shoes of a foreign leader," he replied. "If you had the timetable for troop movements in your country, would you whisper it into the ear of a horse named Fred?

"Would you exchange your country's missile data for a kiss from something with hay on its breath?"

"Probably not," I conceded.

"The horse is a wonderful animal," my friend continued, "but it's no match for a girl when it comes to picking up state secrets, even if you put a pink bow in its mane."

"It's certainly something to consider," I agreed.

"This latest news only points up how far we've fallen behind in global intrigue," he stated.

"In recent months we've learned the CIA has been making the world safe for democracy by opening people's mail, sending explosive cigars to Castro, breaking into psychiatrists' offices, spreading false rumors about Martin Luther King, slipping money to journalists to work as undercover agents and now, plying foreign leaders with companions named Charmaine and Trixie.

"While all this has been going on, what has the RCMP been doing to make the world a better place for our children?

"For heaven's sake, the RCMP hasn't been involved in a single plot to assassinate a foreign head of state, and we don't know if they even own any stag movies, let alone show them Saturday night when some visiting king or prime minister is in Ottawa."

"You're being too harsh on the RCMP," I cautioned. "Perhaps they eavesdrop on private conversations just like the CIA, and compile dossiers on citizens who are critical of the government.

"They may even have a factory that manufactures itching powder and poison rings just behind their stables. We don't know."

"Maybe," my friend said, "but I'd feel a lot better about our spy system if I could pick up the newspaper some day and learn Gordon Sinclair had been paid by the Mounties to blow into Indira Gandhi's ear until she spilled India's howitzer production figures."

CONTROL WAGES, TRUSTEES TOLD

Senior citizens on fixed incomes cannot afford continued escalation of education costs, the Greateer Victoria school board was told Monday.

Ian Cass, in a submission to the board, said the 20 per cent budget increase for 1976 "represents a continuation of wildly escalating education costs which I believe is totally unacceptable to the public generally."

He urged the board to control union settlements, thereby controlling education costs, earmarked at $46.8 million for 1976.

"Senior citizens are now expected to make further sacrifices and apply more of their dwindling resources to school taxes to pay for what many believe to be a cream-puff educational system which does nothing for them."

Cass, an unsuccessful candidate for Saanich alderman in the last municipal election, said it's easy to say "here's a guy who is just chasing the unions", but answers are needed.

"We're faced with a desperate situation. Middle-aged and senior taxpayers are having to give up necessities."

If increased costs continue, he warned, "the board can expect the same kind of violent, philistine red-necked backlash towards education occuring in the States."

James Bay Scores with Team Approach

By DEREK SIDENIUS
Times Staff

In most parts of the province one of the biggest difficulties a person in need faces is trying to find the government office that handles the problem.

But not so in James Bay. There the people go to just one place — the James Bay Community Resources Board — to get the help they need.

It's a novel scheme, unique among urban centres in the province, and its value is just beginning to be realized.

This Wednesday marks an anniversary of sorts for the budding board, for at 7:30 p.m. it will deliver its "first general report to the public" at the James Bay Community School.

The title of the address may sound presumptuous but the board really does have something to brag about.

For in the past year, since its creation under special community resource board legislation, the board has managed to integrate health and social services in the community.

He says the result has been an improvement in the delivery of services to the 10,000 people living in the 12-square block confines of the James Bay community.

Operating on a core budget of $158,000 the board with a staff of between 25 to 30 has developed, sponsored, organized or co-ordinated a plethora of programs in conjunction with the federal manpower and provincial health and human resources departments.

Dill says the emphasis has been on community participation — trying to motivate the people into self-help schemes, trying to get the people involved in the decision-making process.

One indicator of how well the people have responded has been the success of the volunteer call-list.

Volunteer co-ordinator Phil Rogers, 29, says he has at least 400 people volunteering on a regular basis. That's one person out of every 25 in the community.

Their assignments have ranged from tutoring a child having a rough time in school to short-term emergency babysitting, from helping an elderly woman with her housework to doing odd jobs and just "friendly visiting."

There's no end to the different kinds of requests for help and Rogers hopes no end to the number of people prepared to offer their time and services.

Dill says the board's programs didn't really get started until just before Christmas when the board moved into new quarters in the James Bay Square, 435 Simcoe. The main office is on the mall; the health and human resources offices are on the mezzanine floor.

Dill hopes the mall office will develop into a community dropin and information referral centre.

Recently the centre has been receiving each day about 250 telephone calls with 30 to 40 visits from people dropping in for help or information. The numbers are climbing each week.

The major accomplishment of the board, so far, says Dill, has been "brining people together in one place."

Before the services were fragmented . . . or didn't exist."

Now there are such services as employment counselling, family life programs, community probation officer, social and preventive health services . . . all operating in effect onder one roof.

"It's a team approach. We share problems now."

Dill says that besides integrating the services and providing for continuing in-community care, the board aims at making the programs more accessible to the public.

"We want imput from the people in terms of direction, so the locals can have some say in and control over what we do," he says.

The approach is unique for an urban area, although four rural areas — Queen Charlotte Islands, Houston, Granisle and Boundary-Grand Forks — are trying the same thing.

Sierra Club Fights Park Mine

By HUMPHREY DAVY
Times Staff

The provincial government has been asked to turn down an application of Cream Silver Mines Ltd. to operate a mine in one of the most attractive areas of Strathcona Park.

In a brief, the Sierra Club notes that the park has served as the punching bag of past governments and has been severely damaged by hydro power projects, logging, timber trades and mining.

"The time has come to draw the line, to halt the despoiling of parkland that is becoming increasingly valuable," it says.

Sierra director Brian Pinch, who had surveyed the company mining claims at Cream Lake, said it is located in an alpine area and about five miles south of Buttle Lake.

The lake is flanked by Mt. Septimus and Big Interior Mt., he said.

"Not only is the area extremely beautiful but it is said to have the highest recreation potential of an area in the park. "It is the hub of a myriad of hiking routes, including the poplar Flower Ridge, Della Falls, and Price Creek trails."

Pinch said the club's concern over the safety of the Cream Lake areas has been heightened by the government's continuing failure to oppose the development proposal submitted by Cream Silver Mines Ltd.

"We are also disappointed by the recent remarks of Mines Minister Tom Waterland who said that He felt mining in parks' isn't a bad thing' if strict environmental controls are enforced," he said.

"While mining in parks may be necessary in some cases, the minister must realize that mining is not compatible with wilderness recreation and sometimes park values will be greater than mineral values," he added. "Cream Lake is held to be an example of park values being much greater."

Pinch also disclosed that a mines branch report, not yet released to the public, indicated that the mineral values of the Cream Lake area are not "proven to be high" and that further exploration would involve methods that would cause serious damage to the park.

Tailings from the mine would either end up in Buttle Lake or Great Central Lake via Drinkwater Creek, he said.

21 Days to Pay Back Taxes

Esquimalt municipality will take court action against 11 property owners who owe more than $1,000 each in back taxes if the bills are not paid within 21 days.

Council agreed to the action Monday after a report from treasurer Peter Cairns who said about $130,000 is owing in back taxes for 1974 and 1975. One motel owner owes the municipality about $27,000, he said.

Delinquent taxpayers are mainly owners of commercial properties, he said.

In other business, council agreed to extend earthquake insurance coverage to the recreation centre. It will now cost $4,500 to insure the building annually.

Contract with the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was renewed for $18,277.

Mayor Art Young said with licence fees and fines the contract price really costs the municipality only $11,000.

"There is no way we could duplicate it (the pound service) for this kind of money," said Ald. Jim McEvay.

$27M SEIZURE

BOSTON (AP) — A total of $27 million in stolen negotiable securities was seized at the home of a United States postal supervisor, District Attorney Garret Byrne said Monday.

The securities are $2 million in municipal bonds of the State of Maine and $25 million in bearer notes of Avco Financial Services, Inc., of Long Beach, Calif., Byrne said.

Arrested and charged with receiving stolen property was Pasquale Luzzo of Revere, Mass., manager of the Hanover Street Post Office branch in Boston's North End.

A spokesman in Byrne's office said that organized crime figures in Nevada and California had been attempting to purchase the stolen Maine bonds.

TAX TIPS: '76

Tax tips are supplied by the Victoria branch of Revenue Canada, 1415 Vancouver Street. Further information may be obtained by contacting that office at 386-2176.

Q. What kind of expenses are deductible for child care?

A. Deductible expenses include costs of baby-sitting and day nursery care, and up to $15 per child per week for lodging paid at boarding schools and camp. If child care expense are to be deductible, they must be for care in Canada; furthermore, payments for such items a clothing, transportation, education or medical care are not considered to be child care expenses.

Q. I am a transport employee and I have certain travelling and away-from-home expenses. What records are necesary to prove my claim for the expenses when filing my income tax return?

A. If you are an employee of an airline, railway, bus or other transport company carrying goods or passengers and you are required to travel regularly away from the municipality or metropolitan area where you report for work, you may claim actual expenses for meals and lodging while away, minus any amount reimbursed by your employer. Information from your detailed records should be shown on form TL2 and filed with your return. There is an Information Circular 73-21R available at your District Taxation Office on this subject.

Q. I receive approximately $700 a year in interest and dividend income. Can I deduct the $1,000?

A. No. The deduction is the lesser of the qualifying interest income and grossed-up dividends for the year or $1,000. This is shown on Schedule 4 which accompanied your tax return.

Q. I have to travel 35 miles to get from my home to my place of employment. There is not bus servce. Can I claim travelling expenses when filing my income tax return?

A. No. The expense of travelling to and from work is not deductible. However, you may claim an employment expense deduction of three percent of your employment income, up to $150 a year.

Q. If a wage earner, for example, moves in 1975, how does he determine if he qualifies for the moving expense deduction? Can you tell us briefly what the rules are?

A. The most important rule to keep in mind is that moving expenses may be deducted from income if you move to a new residence to earn wages in a new location in Canada, and your new residence is at least 25 miles closer to your new place to work than your former residence was. You should also remember that moving expenses may be deducted only from income earned at a new place of work or business.

Q. Where can I apply for a Registered Home Ownership Savings Plan and what types of investments may I make under these plans?

A. Most trust companies will accept applications for an RHOSP, and only qualified investments may be made. Trust companies generally offer one or more funds which contain qualified investments, thus allowing you to select the fund you wish to invest in. The common ones are often referred to as equity funds, guaranteed funds and mortgage funds.

HEARING DELAYED

Next hearing in the case of former Victoria city police constable Thomas Anderson was delayed Monday to March 15 when the Supreme Court of Canada will hear arguments on the Crown's bid to appeal Anderson's recent victory in B.C. appeal court.

Anderson quit the force May 9, 1974, after being convicted of assault causing bodily harm. But the B.C. court quashed the conviction and directed Anderson's acquittal. The Crown's decision to appeal is delaying an attempt by Anderson to rejoin the Victoria force.

Post Mailers Return

WASHINGTON (AP) — Several hundred printers and mailers crossed the picket lines of the striking pressmen's union at the Washington Post Monday, a spokesman for the Post's management said.

The printers had walked off in sympathy when the mailers went on strike Oct. 5. Both unions are part of the International Typographical Union, which was reportedly to have ended strike benefits for all Post employees Feb. 11.

The mailers — who sort and bundle newspapers as they come off the presses — voted Sunday to accept a new contract.

Post spokesman John Dower said five other unions already have reached agreement with the newspaper, but have held off signing and returning to work pending actions by the mailers and printers.

"The expectation now is that they will be signed fairly soon," Dower said after the printers crossed the picket lines.

A majority of the Post's 843 Guild members repeatedly voted to continue to work during the strike. However, about 250 of the photographers, reporters and advertising staffers walked off, said leaders of the rank and file strike support committee — a group of Guild members observing the pressmen's picket line.

The mailers and printers did not actually return to work Monday night. Union members said they obtained work schedules and new identification cards, and are to start their first full day today.

MEDITERRANEAN POLLUTION PACT

BARCELONA (AP) — Two-thirds of the Mediterranean coastal states approved the first-ever treaty today for the control of pollution in the contaminated sea.

Yugoslavia and Tunisia agreed in principle but said they were unable to sign the final convention and the two protocols regulating dumping by ships and planes in the Mediterranean because of constitutional complications.

Syria left before the end of the 12-day conference of the United Nations Environment Program (UNEP) and Libya did not sign. Albania and Algeria boycotted the meeting.

The treaty lacks enforcement powers and puts much of the burden for financing the control program on UNEP and the participating governments. The 12 countries signing the treaty, however, hailed the agreement as a step forward in international co-operation.

Signing the treaty were Cyprus, Egypt, France, Greece, Israel, Italy, Lebanon, Malta, Morocco, Monaco, Spain and Turkey.

The convention requires signatories to "take all appropriate measures" but says liability for violating the protocols must still be studied.

Noting that approval of the agreement involved co-operation between Israel and Arab states, Egyptian delegate Hamed Sultan said: "There is no eastern or western side of the Mediterranean. It should be a sea of love."

Israel delegate Itzhak Mintz said the treaty shows Israel and the Arab states can come to agreement when they have a common aim.

Right to Appeal AIB Rules Urged

By IAIN HUNTER
Times Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA — Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield called on the government Monday for changes in the anti-inflation legislation to allow companies or unions to appeal rulings of the administrator without having to defy them first.

He charged in the House of Commons that the present appeal procedures violate traditional approaches to the law and damage public respect for the wage and price restraint program.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald however defended the appeal requirements under the legislation and stated that the government wants rulings of the Anti-Inflation Board and its administrator Donald Tansley complied with instead of being challenged.

Stanfield raised the question in the House following Friday's order by Tansley that Irving Pulp and Paper Ltd. of Saint John must pay $125,000 to the Crown in penalties and payment to its employees in excess of anti-inflation guidelines.

The opposition leader argued that it appears no party can appeal a ruling by the board or the administrator "unless that party risks the defiance of the ruling."

He urged the government to amend the legislation or issue an order so that defiance by a party wishing to appeal will not be necessary "in order to preserve something like a traditional approach to law and therefore necessary respect for the program itself."

Macdonald replied that AIB chairman Jean-Luc Pepin has declared that if the board decides that a price or compensation settlement exceeds the guidelines, "and the parties indicate that it would not be their intention to abide by that opinion," it would refer the case to the administrator.

Kinsmen Club of Victoria Marks 50 Years of Service

A half century of community service behind it, Victoria Kinsmen Club starts its next 50 years on Friday.

To mark the occasion Kinsmen will celebrate with an anniversary ball Feb. 28 at the Empress Hotel when all past-members of the Victoria club are invited.

One of these is expected to be Ainslie Helmcken, city archivist, who was charter president of the Victoria Kinsmen Feb. 20, 1926, when he was in his 20s.

The club cites among its achievements the impetus behind construction of Memorial Arena, to which it donated $65,000 just after the Second World War; tennis courts, wading pools and baseball diamonds in public parks of Greater Victoria; the area's first porchlight polio campaign that netted $76,000; sponsorship of Saanich health centre and contribution of $25,000.

The club considers it most outstanding achievement the acquisition of Kinsmen Gorge Park in Esquimalt for $125,000, supported by giant bingo games at Memorial Arena that were attended by 5,000-6,000 players at a time.

Over the years Kinsmen here have helped the Protestant Orphanage, Queen Alexandra Solarium, Arbutus Crafts workshop, air cadets, soccer and baseball teams, and sponsored Schmockey Night in aid of Kinsmen Rehabilitation Foundation.

It has also guided the establishment of four other Kinsmen clubs — Duncan, Port Alberni, Saanich (formerly Vic-Van Isle) and Juan de Fuca — in the period 1936-72.

The mayors of Victoria's four core municipalities and 20 or more past-presidents will be invited to the ball, which will be attended by national president Jim Scarrow, of Saskatoon, and charter national secretary Trevor Thompson, now residing in Nanaimo.

In the midst of all you're hearing about Retirement Savings Plans the Permanent asks you to remember just one thing.

Our Guaranteed Fund is one of the best.

9½% interest per year* is the current rate on our Guaranteed Fund, with no annual administration fee.

That's important.

But even more important, the Permanent Guaranteed Fund has out-performed those of many major companies over the last 10 years.

We don't think we have to convince you that a Registered Retirement Savings Plan is a good thing. The immediate tax savings and the nest egg for the future makes that fact obvious.

It is also obvious that a lot of different financial institutions are selling them and that most are basically the same. Except when it comes to performance.

We also offer an Equity Fund and a Fixed Income Fund with nominal annual administration fees.

So if you are going to open a RRSP this year or considering a change please come into the branch nearest you for more information.

Sobbing Co-Pilot Tells of Fatal Descent

YELLOWKNIFE, N.W.T. (CP) — A sobbing David Hatton, speaking in a voice choked with emotion, gave a public inquiry Monday its first eyewitness account of the final moments in the worst air crash in the history of the Canadian Arctic.

Hatton, 33, was co-pilot of a Panarctic Oils Ltd. Electra which crashed on a flight from Edmonton to Rea Point, N.W.T., on Oct. 30, 1974, killing 32 of 34 men aboard.

The only other survivor was flight engineer Garry Weyman, scheduled to testify today before the inquiry ordered by the federal government.

Hatton said the flight was "perfectly normal in every way" until shortly before its final approach to Rea Point, about 1,500 miles north of Edmonton.

The Electra had descended from its cruising altitude of 2,500 feet to about 300 feet, flying on instruments with no visual contact with the ground, he said.

When the plane levelled out at 300 feet, "it appeared we were over open water."

"Off in the distance I got some visibility," Hatton said. "It looked like we were approaching the edge of the ice line."

He then relayed this information to the pilot, Brian Thomson of Leduc, Alta., who was killed in the crash.

The pilot, who had been manually controlling the plane's power levers, then "reached over and pulled the levers back" in a smooth movement, "not back to flight idle but enough to initiate descent."

"He then moved his hand on to the wheel," Hatton said. "Then he pushed the wheel ahead. He did not cry out, he did not slump over the controls."

"I was startled and I think Weyman was too," Hatton said, noting that at this point the flight crew was lifted up against their seat belts and the plane began to descend rapidly.

He said he immediately focused on the instruments in front of him to provide the captain with information.

"I advised him we were descending from 300 feet. The vertical rate of descent was 1,750 feet a minute and the needle continued to swing around until it stopped at 2,000."

He called out the situation to the pilot, but "there was no reaction," Hatton said. "Both his hands were on the control wheel and he was looking straight ahead."

"By then we had gone through 300 feet to 200 feet," Hatton said, stating he was "at first amazed and then frightened" by the captain's lack of response.

"We tore through 200 to 100 feet," Hatton continued, stating that he and Weymand shouted out to the pilot the altitudes the plane was dropping to.

"I realized there was something desperately wrong and something had to be done," Hatton said. He and Weymand then reached over to push the power levers forward.

"But we were finished, 100 feet above the ground and descending at 2,000 feet a minute with a maximum landing weight of over 50 tons.

"It was all over."

Hatton said the plane might have been able to recover at 200 feet if action had been taken immediately.

He said he was expecting Thomson to follow procedure and call for a missed approach or apply power to the engines.

"The way he had been flying the aircraft had been very smooth and I had every confidence in his ability," Hatton said, adding that he thought "all along that this guy is really doing an exceptional job."

The inquiry was also told of a radio conversation with the pilot of a twin Otter that had taken off from Rea Point shortly before the Electra was due to land.

The man reported a fog bank at the south end of the runway, Hatton said, stating that it might be necessary "to get under a layer or penetrate cloud, or something like that."

Hatton said the pilot's knowledge of the fog bank may have prompted him "to go a little lower than usual."

It was the first time that Hatton publicly spoke in such detail about the crash. Both he and Weyman, acting on the advice of their lawyers, declined to testify at a coroner's inquest into the deaths of the men on board the Electra.

The inquiry was to continue with the 11th day of testimony today.

$1 MILLION BOOST FOR POSTAL CLERKS

OTTAWA (CP) New uniforms, costing between $800,000 and $1 million, are being supplied to postal clerks across the country, Postmaster-General Bryce Mackasey announced Monday.

Mackasey, who sported one of the new navy jackets and ties at a ceremony unveiling the outfits at the main postal terminal here, said the "uniforms have been planned for some time and are an important part of the post office."

He felt they would "help our empolyees" morale."

Each postal clerk will receive two dress jackets, one in navy, the other maroon, six shirts or blouses, four ties or scarves and an identification pin.

The uniforms will replace the green smocks or ordinary street clothes previously worn by clerks.

Claude Taylor 'Best Choice' At Air Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — The appointment Monday of Claude Taylor to head troubled Air Canada already is proving popular.

"We feel he's the best choice right now to manage the airline and to lead it," said Jack Murta (Lisgar), Progressive Conservative transport critic, speaking for the party. Conservative MPs were strongly critical of airline operations under Yves Pratte, who resigned as chairman late in November.

Airline officials say privately they are relieved. One official said the airline has gone through eight rough months and he is happy it is over.

Taylor, 50, an Air Canada employee for 27 years, is highly regarded in the airline industry and those who work with him have been saying for weeks that they hoped he would be chosen to head the publicly-owned airline. He was most recently the airline's vice-president of public affairs.

In announcing Taylor's appointment as president and chief executive officer, Transport Minister Otto Lang told reporters a new chairman is unlikely to be named for some time.

It is understood the chairmanship was offered to prominent Montreal businessman Pierre Des Marais who turned it down. With the chief executive officer's duties transferred to the president, the chairman's job has lost much of its power.

Ralph Vaughan has resigned as president to become senior vice-president at Air Canada and Pierre Taschereau, chairman of Canadian National Railways, will remain as acting chairman of the airline for the time being.

Taylor's appointment was announced by Lang after an Air Canada board meeting here, ending about three months of frustration in the airline which has been operating without a permanent head.

Taylor said he will move to bolster company morale and hopes to make a profit this year after two successive deficits. The airline lost about $12.5 million in 1975 and $9.2 million in 1974.

Taylor has several years experience working his way up the airline executive ladder.

Born in Salisbury, N.B., he attended McGill University and is a registered industrial accountant.

He joined Air Canada in Moncton, N.B., in 1949 and was transferred to Montreal in 1950 where he has remained since, mainly in marketing and sales jobs.

Olympic Disaster Plan Off

MONTREAL (CP) — Construction progress on Montreal's Olympic stadium has already eliminated the need for an alternative "catastrophe plan" for track and field events, it was announced Monday.

Victor Goldbloom, the Quebec minister responsible for the Olympics installations board, told a news conference he is also confident that the stadium's swimming facilities will be ready for the July 17 opening of Summer Olympics.

Goldbloom spoke to more than 100 reporters and photographers who toured the east-end Montreal Olympic site for the first time since the minister and his colleagues reported to the International Olympic Committee meeting at Innsbruck, Austria, just before the Winter Olympics.

The Canadian organizers won the approval of Lord Killanin and his IOC for a new plan for bare-bones construction of the 70,000-seat stadium.

Preparations already are complete or on schedule for the 19 Olympic sports other than track and swimming.

But the IOC also demanded from Goldbloom and the installations board a pledge that a "catastrophe" plan would be put into effect whereby track and field events and swimming would be shifted to a north-end arena if stadium construction failed.

Plea Bargaining Criticized

OTTAWA (CP) — The Law Reform Commission of Canada says attorneys-general and judges should act to stop plea bargaining, which the commission defines as any agreement by the accused to plead guilty in return for some benefit.

The commission, in a working paper on control of the process of criminal procedure, says plea bargaining could be ended at once if attorneys-general directed prosecutors to discontinue the practice. It recommended this.

Plea bargaining explains why, for instance, many murder charges end as manslaughter convictions. The charge of murder is placed to scare the accused into pleading guilty to manslaughter, saving time and money.

The prosecution, to induce a guilty plea, also can offer to reduce the number of charges, proceed by summary rather than the more serious indictment procedure, and recommend a light sentence.

The commission condemns this.

Plea bargaining takes place in private. This means that the judge and the public never really hear the case.

"A dangerous criminal should not be let off with a minor conviction and penalty just because he is willing to plead guilty, and thus save the state the time and expense of a trial," the commission said. "Nor does society benefit from a negotiated plea of guilty by a petty offender who should not have been prosecuted."

It also recommended changes that would make attorneys-general more politically accountable for the administration of justice. Among them:

● Attorneys-general should issue directives to prosecutors establishing policy on discretion in placing charges. The policy guides should be made public.

● Consent of the attorney-general to prosecute charges should be required to ensure uniformity of law enforcement across Canada. "As applied to the offence of public nudity, for instance, the rule acts as a check on overzealous or puritanical prosecutors."

● The attorney-general or his deputy should be required to approve all aplications for preventive detention, which the commission says should be abolished. Preventive detention means some offenders can be jailed indefinitely.

● The right of appeal should continue to be subject to the consent of the attorney-general or his deputy. The same would apply to stays of proceedings, which leave an accused person accused but not tried.

Sparkes Gets by Will In B.C. Final Opener

By BILL WALKER
Times Staff

Bernie Sparkes of the Burnaby Winter Club was one victory away from his eighth appearance in the Brier Canadian curling championship as play began at noon today in the second game of the B.C. curling playoffs at the Victoria Curling Club.

Sparkes Monday night defeated B.C. interior champion Darryl Will of Kamloops 7-5 in the first game of the best-of-three series for the right to enter the Brier at Regina, March 8-13, in a game that went down to the very last rock.

If a third and a deciding game is necessary it will be played at Victoria Curling Club tonight at 7 p.m.

The big break in a fairly routine game came for Sparkes in the fourth end.

With Sparkes lying two and having the hammer, Will attempted to punch out Sparkes' second stone — the first was in the eight foot behind a guard — through two of his own rocks at the back of the house. But the in-turn attempt came over a bit too much and knocked Sparkes' rock on to one of his own.

It was then simply a matter of Sparkes hitting for a third point. Which he did.

Many spectators thought at the time Will attempted the shot that he was lying second. But he cleared up that point. "No, Sparkes was second; otherwise I would have drawn to the other side and let Sparkes try for his two. The in-turn just came up too much."

Will came right back to get a deuce in the fifth end when Sparkes' final rock fell back on a takeout try to chip his own stone and Will had a free draw for a second point.

Will later explained that there was a definite but playable run in the ice down the middle but what did trouble him more was that "the ice was super keen especially coming toward the glass."

Actually his rink did have its problems on draw shots on the even ends while lead Mass Tahara had a particularly galling evening particularly on his takeouts on the odd ends until Will located the flaw in his delivery.

Although Sparkes appeared to be in command most of the way, especially after the fourth end, he couldn't pull away from the Interior champion. He blanked the sixth but had to take a single in the seventh. Will then blanked the eighth but was forced to take one with a draw against two in the ninth. Sparkes tried to roll out in the 10th but stayed on a hit to take a 6-4 lead.

In the 11th it appeared that Will might have gotten the break he was looking for when Sparkes' second, Al Cook, missed a takeout and Will's second, Bruce Lemke, promply drew in for second shot.

But such was not to be. Sparkes' third, Bert Gretzinger, killed one rock and then Will's third, Don Whyte, committed the cardinal sin of drawing through the house. That killed all hope of a big end. Gretzinger quickly took care of the other Will rock and when Will went down to throw his last stone, Sparkes was lying four against him.

However, Will showed his coolness, as he had done all evening, and drew up to shot rock for the single point.

One down coming home, he couldn't get anything out in front at the start of the 12th end. Then he finally did and, combined with a miss, set about trying for the steal.

When it came down to his last rock there was a stone about three feet off centre in front of the house; and he made a perfect draw to the eight foot on the tee line and behind cover in a last-ditch clutch shot.

Sparkes ignored the rock and elected to draw. He made it but was only about two inches shy of being too far as the sweepers almost kept on the rock too long..

As it turned out, two factors helped beat Will — the takeout try that failed in the fourth when he said "the rock pulled just a little more than I expected" — he had thrown the same shot moments earlier — and that missed draw by Whyte in the 11th.

He himself curled as well as anyone except Gretzinger, according to averages complied by Ted Thonger, publisher of the Canadian Curling News. And time and time again he pulled his rink out of trouble.

Will had 76 per cent, the same as his second, Lemke. Whyte had 67 per cent and Tahara 46 per cent.

For Sparkes' rink, Gretzinger was high with 81 per cent. Sparkes had 69 per cent, Cook 67 per cent and Keiven Bauer, the lead, 66 per cent.

Curling: Class Spells Sparkes In PCCA Final

The weekend in review and if it was disappointing that the Island rinks didn't do better than they did in the Pacific Coast Curling Association playdowns at the Victoria Curling Club, at least they can be assured that as the B.C. playoffs were underway today the Coast fortunes were in good hands.

Bernie Sparkes, the 35-year-old veteran, bidding for his eighth Brier appearance, was clearly the class of the weekend show; and the tougher the game became, the tougher Sparkes was. And that's where class told.

It's all well and good to make all your shots in the early ends, but the true measure of a champion is to make the shots he has to make to survive, and Sparkes did just that; not once but several times.

Against young Craig MacRae of Nanaimo the first night, he appeared headed for defeat until the MacRae rink made a fatal mistake. A missed takeout gave Sparkes a chance for a draw behind cover and a steal of one on the 12th and final end. He didn't miss the opportunity. And there was another key end that didn't really show on the scorecard. That was against Gary Sigurdson of Cloverdale in the final match. With Sigurdson leading 1-0 and playing the second end, Sigurdson had two rocks in the house, and guarded, when Sparkes went down to throw his last rock. He was in trouble as the ice was as yet untested.

But Sparkes calmly called an out-turn draw to the four-foot ring and pulled off the shot. Later, with Sigurdson leading 6-3, it was Sparkes, with last rock against him, who applied the pressure. He forced Sigurdson on the defensive with two difficult attempts at doubles in the ninth end. And when Sigurdson missed, Sparkes had a single.

Then, in the climactic 10th end, it was again Sparkes who took the play away from the Cloverdale skip. He once more forced Sigurdson to try two near-impossible doubles; and again Sigurdson failed the test. It appeared to many that Sigurdson's refusal to throw the out-turn may have cost him the crucial two points he gave up. Of course, that's hindsight, but it was peculiar in the game to see Sigurdson throwing almost 90 per cent in-turns and Sparkes 90 per cent out-turns. And oddly enough the pattern for the Sparkes rink was predominantly an outturn game.

So he's a true champion; and the measure of the esteem in which he is held was probably best illustrated Sunday. A PCCA official, apprised of the score at the seventh end, 6-2 for Sigurdson, and the possibility of a second playoff game, suggested: "I wouldn't be too sure, just yet." How right he was. No further playoff was needed.

By now, it's possible that the B.C. playoff will have been decided. And regardless of the winner between Sparkes and Darryl Will of Kamloops, it's certain that B.C. will be well represented in the Brier. For Sparkes it would mean trip No. 8, and the way he is playing — undefeated in 11 playoff games (as he was by Sunday afternoon) — he would appear to rank as the favorite. And if Will wins? Then obviously he would qualify as a worthy rep as well.

The Olympics are over and doping, or drug-taking, continues to be a problem. But what of Joan Wenzel of Canada? Joan, it will be recalled, took a cold tablet at the Pan-American Games and was promptly banned from international athletics for life. Sure, she is to have a hearing to attempt to clear herself, but by now she has lost nearly a season of training in preparation for the Summer Olympics at Montreal.

Now let's switch to Innsbruck. Soviet skier Galina Kulakova has a cold and takes nose drops for the cure. But the droplets contain a drug that is on the banned list. So Kulakova loses her bronze medal. But is she banned? No, she is allowed to continue and win another bronze in addition to a gold.

Then there is the captain of the Czechoslovakian hockey team, Fran Pospisil. He was unfortunate because his number had been drawn by lottery to undergo a dope test after a win by the Czechs over Poland.

Alas, not one, but two of the banned drugs were found in his urine. He had taken codeine and morphine to help cure his cold and had been found out. But where is Pospisil in the next game? In the stands? No. He's right back on the ice taking his regular turn.

So those are three instances of athletes flunking the dope test. One is out for life, the other two can continue to compete. There must be a better way; or why shouldn't Wenzel be cleared right now? It's that simple.

Bannerman Welcomes Challenge

Murray Bannerman isn't anxious to lose his job, but he figures to be a better goaltender because Dan Rogers is "feelin' okay."

Fully recovered from a knee injury, Rogers accepted his first starting assignment in over six weeks when Victoria Cougars defeated Flin Flon Bombers 6-1 in Saturday's Western Canada Hockey League meeting at Memorial Arena.

Coach Pat Ginnell wouldn't name his starting netminder for tonight's rematch with Flin Flon, but the signs indicate it's Bannerman's turn.

In which case, Bannerman figures he'll face the Bombers with a psychological advantage that has been missing on occasion during the past several weeks.

When Rogers was injured, and with no one to challenge him for starting assignments, the astute Bannerman figures he might have faced some games a bit too casually.

Rogers didn't have a difficult time Saturday, but he played well to show Ginnell that he has recovered.

Bannerman noticed, too. Murray turned in a sizzling performance in Monday's workout.

The 18-year-old admitted the challenge from one of his own (Rogers) might have had something to do with it.

Ginnell isn't too sure where he'll play right winger-centre Brent Kristoff, recalled from the affiliate Nanaimo Clippers for the balance of the season. One of five Clippers who played Saturday, Kristoff scored a goal and played well to earn promotion.

Don Johnson, Greg Tebbutt and Rick Durston, Cougar regulars who sat out the game in favor of the farmhands, all are scheduled to return to the lineup tonight . . .

Victoria Bates, who wound up with a share of the championship following the world softball tournament at New Zealand earlier this month, will be honored between periods at tonight's game (8 p.m.)

NHL Boss Scoffs At Shift Reports

TORONTO (CP) — A report that as many as six cities in the World Hockey Association may join the National Hockey League has been called "utterly ludicrous" by Clarence Campbell, president of the NHL.

"It hasn't got a vestige of truth in it," he said in a telephone interview from Montreal.

It was reported earlier in Toronto that the financially-troubled Pittsburgh Penguins and California Golden Seals may be shifted to Cleveland and Edmonton, cities said to be in danger of losing their WHA teams.

The report also said if the WHA fails to operate next season the NHL is prepared to look at the WHA teams in Cincinnati, Houston, Indianapolis, Quebec and Winnipeg. The Toronto Globe and Mail said as many as four of those cities would get expansion teams.

"It's never been considered by any responsible person in the NHL," Campbell said. "If they (WHA) goes out of business, they die.

In league action Monday Toronto Maple Leafs defeated Washington Capitals 5-1 and St. Louis Blues stopped California Golden Seals 4-2. With their victory the Blues moved to within four points of second place Vancouver Canucks in the Smythe Division. Canucks play Philadelphia tonight and Wednesday night. The Wednesday game was postponed from Dec. 12 when a paralyzing snow storm hit the Vancouver area.

The Canucks got good news and bad news Monday. Goalkeeper Gary Smith who had quit the team in a huff a week ago Sunday, leaving the Coliseum after being pulled by manager-coach Phil Maloney and was later suspended, returned to the fold.

Maloney said Smith's suspension, earlier announced as indefinite, was changed to a one-week sentence on advice of lawyers.

Then came the bad news. Half an hour after Smith showed up for practice, goalkeeper Curt Ridley, who had replaced Smith and played well in the game at Toronto Saturday night, suffered a broken finger when he stopped a shot with his gloved hand. He will be out of action for about two weeks.

'Won't Mess Around' Says the New Connors

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. (AP) — Jimmy Connors plans to keep a tighter rein on himself this year than in 1975, a year in which he made a lot of money but failed to play up to expectations.

Connors, 23, lost the U.S. Open and Wimbledon tennis finals although he did earn more than $400,000 by capturing three challenge matches, one in singles and two in doubles.

He admits he didn't train the way he had previously, but the outspoken left-hander says it won't happen again.

"I was messing around too much last year, that's true," he said in an interview. "I can mess around the night before a big match but the things I do two or three weeks before finally caught up with me."

SPORT SHORTS

Connors has broken with his long-time adviser Bill Riordan, although the latter still is a co-promoter of a $250,000 challenge match Feb. 28 at Las Vegas against Manuel Orantes of Spain.

Orantes was the winner against Connors at Forest Hills in the U.S. Open.

"I hate to lose more than I like to win," Connors declared. "The way these guys acted after they beat me told me little secrets."

He referred to Arthur Ashe at Wimbledon and Orantes at Forest Hills but didn't quote them. Jimmy had won both events in 1974.

Connors, trying to tone down his brashness, added:

"So you get down to work so they won't beat you anymore. I worked hard on my tennis when I was playing matches, but I never did anything outside of that. My training habits kind of went bad for six months or so."

Elsewhere in tennis, San Diego Friars have signed former Australian Davis Cupper Rod Laver to a contract which a team spokesman said makes him "the highest paid player in World Team Tennis history." Laver, 37, is a four-time Wimbledon champion and the only player to win the United States, British, French and Australian titles in the same year twice—in 1962 and 1969. Terms of the contract were not disclosed. Meanwhile, after a string of 23 successive match victories in World Championship Tennis play last year, Laver lost Sunday to Ken Rosewall at Keahou Kona, Hawaii, by scores of 6-4, 6-1, 6-3 . . . In WCT play in Toronto the same day, Bjorn Borg rallied from some lackluster early play to defeat Vitas Gerulaitis 2-6, 6-3, 6-1 in the men's singles final.

RECORD EXACTA PAYOFF

ARCADIA, Calif. (AP) — Santa Anita recorded a record $7,180.50 exacta payoff on a $5 wager Monday when the 99-to-1 Dateable won the fifth race and the 5-to-1 shot Our Market placed second.

The payoff exceeded the previous record of $5,747 set in 1973.

In exacta betting, the wagerer must correctly choose both the winner and second place-finisher in a race.

Ridden by apprentice jockey Sam Semkin, the five-year-old Dateable stormed from well back to win by a nose in a blanket finish. Our Market was another nose ahead of Laurie's Game in the fifth race.

There were 49 holders of $5 tickets on the winning 6-10 combination and two who had $10 tickets worth $14,360 each, among the throng of 37,400 present for the holiday racing program.

BAUN RELIEVED OF TORO DUTIES

TORONTO (CP) — Bobby Baun said Monday night he has no intention of handling other duties for Toronto Toros after being fired as coach of the World Hockey Association club earlier in the day.

"I was hired to coach the club, that's the only job I was interested in," he said in a telephone interview from his farm at nearby Claremont.

"It's too early to talk about what I'm going to do now. I'm not in the mood for it."

The Toros announced that Baun had been relieved of his duties as coach of the last-place team and that general manager Gilles Leger would take over Baun's responsibilities for the rest of the season.

"Relieved isn't the word for it," said Baun. "I was fired."

Leger has been in the organization since 1972-73 when he joined the old Ottawa Nationals as assistant coach and chief scout for the initial WHA season.

Before joining the Nationals, he had eight winning seasons as coach of St. Francis Xavier University of Antigonish, N.S.

The mid-season shakeup was the second in as many seasons by the Toros, who have the worst record and one of the biggest payrolls in the league.

Last year Billy Harris was replaced by Bob Leduc in mid-season. Baun, a long-time defenceman in the National Hockey League, replaced Leduc last June.

The Harris-Leduc tandem led the Toros to a second-place finish in the Canadian Division. This year they have a record of 15 wins, 35 defeats and five ties.

BOBBY BAUN

They had only a win and two ties to show for their last 16 games and are 10 points behind Edmonton Oilers, who occupy the fourth and final playoff spot in the Canadian Division.

The Toros said that the decision to drop Baun was Leger's.

Taxi Squads Urged for CFL

TORONTO (CP) — Changes in the roster rules are expected to be an important topic at the annual meeting of the Canadian Football League, which begins here today.

Proposals range from the addition of one Canadian to the present limit of 17 Canadians and 15 Americans to creation of a four-man taxi squad for each team.

The taxi squad proposal will be made by Bob Geary, general manager of Montreal Alouettes.

"They would be allowed to appear in games only on the special teams," Geary explained. "there would be two Americans and two Canadians and we'd pay them $300 a game."

Geary said his scheme would be cheaper than the current practice of most clubs, which maintain an illegal taxi squad with the help of the league's injury reserve and tryout rules.

"We went into the Grey Cup with 32 men but we were paying 39," Geary recalled.

Under the Montreal proposal, the league's 21-day injured list would be discarded. Players designated as injured would not be allowed to play again that season.

Teams would find replacements from among the four legal taxi squad players under the Montreal rule.

Winnipeg Blue Bombers have argued for the addition of a single Canadian rule. They have failed to sell that idea in the past, but an increase in injuries last season could change that.

Toronto Argonauts favor the addition of two Canadians and removal of restrictions of the use of the 15th American, referred to as the designated import. Under last season's rule, the player replaced by the designated import was not allowed to return to the game.

Dick Shatto, Toronto managing director, argues that "you might as well let him (the designated import) play because you have to pay him anyway."

The meeting will also hear bids for the 1977 Grey Cup game.

Montreal had been expected to get the game after Toronto was awarded the 1976 game, but uncertainty over the ownership of the city's Olympic Stadium has prompted a bid from Ottawa.

REBELS TAKE CITY CROWN IN THRILLER

Scoring the winning point with 31 seconds remaining, Nancy Duncan led Lampson Rebels to a thrilling 19-18 victory over St. Andrews Sunday to capture the Greater Victoria midget "B" girls' basketball championship.

The win gave the Rebels, coached by Jim Sherlock, a 2-0 sweep over St. Andrews in the best-of-three final series. Lampson won the first game last Wednesday 26-20.

Miss Duncan topped the scoring with 29 points in the two games. Cathy Wallace was the leading St. Andrew scorer with 22 for the series.

Canada in World Final

Canada entered Sunday's American Zone final with a 3-1 lead. Canada defeated the United States last month.

The Canadian team depended on the skills of Thai members Channarong Ratanasuangsuang of Calgary and Raphi Kachanaraphi of Toronto, who gained the series point by defeating Jorge Palazuelos and Roy Diaz Gonzalez in doubles, 15-12 and 15-1.

In other games Sunday, Mike Epstein of Vancouver defeated Jose Manuel Icaza 15-12, 15-12, Diaz Gonzalez of Mexico defeated James McKee of Toronto 15-2, 15-9, Jamie Paulson of Toronto and McKee downed brothers Victor and Ricardo Jaramillo 15-5 and 15-3, and Victor Jaramillo Luque beat Wayne Macdonnell of Vancouver 15-3, 18-16.

A Week to Remember

TORONTO (CP) — It's likely going to take a while before left winger Marc Tardif of Quebec Nordiques forgets about the 19th week of World Hockey Association play.

The 26-year-old native of Granby, Que., became the first player in major league hockey to score 100 points this season and the first to score more than 50 goals.

Tardif recorded his 100th point last Wednesday when he scored two goals and assisted on another in his 55th game of the season, a WHA record for scoring 100 points in the fewest games played. That brought his output for the season to 49 goals and 51 assists.

Tardif's 50th goal was the third fastest in major league history. Bobby Hull of Winnipeg Jets scored 50 goals in 50 WHA games in the 1974-75 season and Maurice Richard of Montreal Candiens scored 50 in 50 games during the National Hockey League season.

Belmont Braves and Dunsmuir Demons, currently deadlocked in first place, are scheduled to meet tonight at Belmont and Thursday at Dunsmuir. Both squads have 9-1 records but Braves have a better points-for-and-against record.

Braves moved into a tie for the lead Monday by edging host Reynolds Roadrunners 62-56 behind the 26-point production of Darrell Johnson.

Braves led 35-25 at the half but Roadrunners rallied to within one point going into the final quarter before Belmont regained control.

Jim Dunn sparked Reynolds with 17 points.

In Greater Victoria High School Girls' League play, Reynolds Roadrunners clinched first place in Division "B" by posting a 46-32 decision over Belmont Tomahawks while Mt. Douglas Ramblers kept pace in second spot with a 65-28 victory at Parkland.

Rhonda Keller and Tracy McAra fired 17 points each to lead Reynolds, which has an 11-1 record and one game left to play in a 13-game schedule. Sheila Chalmers led Belmont with 15 points.

Meet Dodge DART LITE

a special light-weight Dart that gets 43 MPG on the highway, 28 MPG around town.*

It only stands to reason that the more a car weighs, the more fuel it takes to move it. So, to make the most of your fuel dollar, the new Dart Lite weighs less.

We put it on a diet, and the result is up to 43 MPG. To trim down the weight, we've used lightweight aluminum components. And, of course, the 225 CID Slant Six is the engine.

Now, check the chart with the mileage figures. When have you ever seen a car with an automatic transmission get such good mileage?

| 225 CID SLANT SIX | HIGHWAY | CITY |
|---|---|---|
| 4-Speed Overdrive | 43 | 28 |
| 3-Speed Manual | 37 | 27 |
| Torqueflite Automatic | 36 | 27 |

*These mileage results are based on the United States Environmental Protection Agency tests covering both city and highway driving conditions. Results have been converted to Imperial Gallons. The results you get will depend on engine and transmission combinations, optional equipment, and your own driving habits, road and weather conditions and how your car is maintained.

Dart Lite is very big on economy. It's also big on room and comfort. Unlike tiny little economy cars, Dart Lite gives you room for 5 adults. And the trunk is downright gigantic.

So while Dart Lite may give you the kind of gas mileage you expect from a little economy car – it's anything but little.

See the new Dart Lite at your Dodge dealer's. It's lost a little weight to gain a lot more friends. And be sure to see the complete Dodge line featuring Electronic Ignition, Unibody construction, Torsion-Quiet Ride and the 12-month unlimited mileage warranty... the first year's on us.

French-Canadians Less Inclined to Others—Study

OTTAWA (CP) — French-Canadians are less favorably disposed to other ethnic groups and to immigration than any other major group in the country, says results of a national survey conducted for the secretary of state department.

The survey, presented to the Canadian Conference of Multi-culturalism during the weekend, found French-Canadians more authoritarian and "ethnocentric," whether living in Quebec or elsewhere in the country.

At the same time, English-speaking Canadians in the Atlantic provinces were reported to be more favorable toward authority than English-speakers elsewhere in Canada. They were also said to be less favorably inclined to other ethnic groups.

In general, Canadians of English-speaking origin were found to share basically the same attitudes toward immigration and cultural diversity as English-speaking Canadians of other ethnic backgrounds.

Th study found a general acceptance of immigration in all parts of the country but a marked preference for immigrants with higher education and skilled trades. However, there was greater antipathy toward imiigrants with a high economic status already in Canada and less toward those low in the economic scale.

Reaction was mostly negative to immigration from Communist countries and to an unselective and open immigration policy generally.

Both English-speaking and French-speaking groups regarded each other highly in comparison to other ethnic groups. Both rated northern European groups higher than eastern or southern European immigrants. Europeans in general rated higher than immigrants from other parts of the world.

"Those of Russian and Ukrainian descent were somewhat less positive in their preception of immigration consequences, most concerned about unempolyment and found immigrants of all kinds less acceptable than members of other non-English, non-French descent groups," the study found.

Canadians of higher economic status were more tolerant of other ethnic groups and more favorable to immigration in general.

The conference received only a summary of the survey's findings, based on interviews conducted in the summer of 1974. The interviews were said to cover a cross-section representing 95 per cent of the country's population.

17 Die on Train

BOMBAY, India (UPI) — Fire engulfed a coach of a speeding suburban train and killed 17 persons. Cause of the fire was not immediately known but could have been due to a short circuit.

BEFORE THE JUDGE

An 11-day preliminary hearing ended Monday in Victoria provincial court with a decision by Judge William Ostler that four Victoria area men must face a higher-court trial on a major narcotics charge.

The charge against David Michael Henderson, 22, William Paul Murray, 27, David Yosha Robertson, 38, and Donald William Thomson, 42, is one of conspiracy between Sept. 1 and Oct. 19, 1975, to traffic in pethidine in Victoria county.

Once their hearing ended, a second began for Murray and Thomson on a 30-count charge of conspiracy to traffic in 10 drugs, conspiracy to possess them for trafficking and possession of them for the same purpose. It will continue Thursday.

Indications were a separate charge against Henderson of trafficking in pethidine would be dropped. He is free on bail while bail has been refused for Robertson.

In the court section of Judge F. S. Green, a 21-day jail term followed by 18 months' probation was the penalty for Richard Verdier Rowlinson, 38, of 647 Pine, who will also have to do 80 hours of community-service work after leaving jail.

Green said Rowlinson had a "disgraceful" criminal record and was on probation at the time of the theft. But on the other hand, Rowlinson was looking after a large family and was a man "of ambition and hard work."

Wayne Raymond Pilkington, 27, of 101 Island Highway, pleaded guilty to a Port Alberni charge of impaired driving and refusing to take a breath-analysis test Oct. 14, 1975, and to a Saanich charge of impaired driving and common assault Dec. 14, 1975.

The sentences by Green were $600 or 60 days for the Port Alberni offences and 21 days for the two in Saanich, the common assault coming when Pilkington struck a driver who had criticized his wife's driving.

Defence lawyer Roger Cardinal said Pilkington had decided to serve the time instead of paying the fines, which meant a total jail term of 60 days. Green added an 18-month driving ban.

★ ★ ★

Community-service work orders were also included by Green in sentences imposed for two persons in separate cases.

Longest was a 40-hour order for Susan Marilyn Infanti, 28, of 513 Ardersier, who pleaded guilty one week ago today to a Saanich charge of shoplifting two food items and some film Feb. 9 from a Safeway store. She was put on probation for eight months.

John Hendrik Van Den Berg, 22, of 225 Quebec, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of possession Feb. 6 of about three-quarters of an ounce of hashish. He was fined $60, put on probation for three months and instructed to do 30 hours of community-service work.

★ ★ ★

Bail was refused by Green for Victoria area resident Anthony Garfield Brown, 35, address not known, on a Victoria charge of defrauding the public Dec. 23 of $80 received from the B.C. human resources department.

The judge noted Brown had a record of 51 offences dating back to 1958 in various places across Canada and also took into account a new four-count Victoria charge of uttering read Monday against Brown and involving a total of about $1,196.

Brown was remanded one week for further hearing.

Green also refused bail for Mark Jonathan Twiss, 23, of 129 Croft, on a three-count charge of uttering two cheques Nov. 14 in Saanich for a total of $797 and obtaining cash between Nov. 14 and Jan. 2 from a Victoria bank through worthless cheques.

At the request of Legal Aid duty counsel David Adams, Green prohibited publication or broadcast of bail-hearing details. Twiss was remanded to Thursday for further hearing.

★ ★ ★

In traffic court, David Allen Diamond, 20, of 1043 Sutlej, pleaded guilty to a Victoria charge of driving Feb. 8 while under a licence suspension imposed Jan. 6. Diamond was sentenced by Judge Blake Allan to 10 days in jail and a six-month driving ban.

★ ★ ★

Clay Sherman Hodges, 18, of 927 Craigflower, was fined a total of $600 by Green and banned from driving for 12 months following a plea of guilty to a Victoria charge of criminally negligent driving and failing to remain. Hodges' car hit a parked vehicle Feb. 8 on Yates, then went through 19 traffic lights and seven traffic control devices during a chase from downtown Victoria to a dead-end street in Vic West.

Impaired-driving fines Monday:

Norah Henry, 35, of Sidney, stopped Jan. 17 in Sidney, $50; Craig Benjamin Seguin, 23, of 613 Mary, stopped Wednesday in Victoria, $400, and Gordon Clyde Massick, 47, of Sidney, stopped Oct. 9 in Saanich, $400.

All three received driving bans of varying length while Seguin and Massick must take impaired-driver courses. Mrs. Henry and Seguin pleaded guilty while Massick was found guilty after a trial.

Only 'Blame Claims' Will Count

Only "Blameworthy claims" against ICBC will disqualify young drivers from the new 25 per cent safe-drivers' rebate program, ICBC president Pat McGeer said Monday.

The government announced last week that single male drivers under 25 who complete this year without any claims against ICBC and with less than five demerit points will qualify for a 25 per cent rebate of their total premium payment.

McGeer explained that only claims in which the young driver is to blame will be counted as disqualification from the rebate scheme.

Meanwhile, NDP leader Dave Barreet, just back from a three-week vacation in Mexico and California, said now that Premier Bennett has politicially intertered in ICBC, he should roll back all the rate increases.

"Obviously the premier has decided to interfere, so lets straighten out the whole mess," he said.

The rates should be rolled back to the level the NDP had planned (increases of about 19 to 40 per cent), said Barrett, and ICBC be subsidized from the gasoline tax.

Liberal leader Gordon Gibson said he felt the rebate program should be offered across the board to all drivers.

"If it's sound for one group, it's sound for all," he said, adding that the good driver incentive program should be coupled with a premium surcharge for those who cause accidents, to balance out the costs.

But the scheme does not even deal adequately with the special problems of young drivers, he said, because the basic principle of a public insurance company should be that people are charged only for things that they can control.

COASTAL SEABED: WHO OWNS IT?

VANCOUVER (CP) — The British Columbia Court of Appeal reserved decision Monday on ownership of the seabed under the waters between Vancouver Island and the B.C. mainland.

The issue was placed before the appeal court in an application by the Government of B.C. It asked the court to rule that the waters of the Strait of Juan De Fuca, the Strait of Georgia (Gulf of Georgia), Johnstone Strait and the Queen Charlotte Strait belong to B.C.

The application was opposed by the federal Government of Canada but the position of the B.C. Government was adopted by the government of Newfoundland.

The supreme Court of Canada ruled in 1967 that offshore mineral rights belong to the federal governent. But the B.C. Government, under the provincial Constitutional Questions Determination Act, decided to get its own ruling on the matter from the Appeal Court of B.C., which is called upon from time to time by the provincial cabinet to rule on constitutional matters.

There was no previous lower court ruling.

A ruling also would determine whether the waters involved are inland waters. B.C. claims they are.

BANK THEFT BY MANAGER

KELOWNA (CP) — Marshall George, 39, a former Bank of Montreal branch manager, was convicted Monday of stealing $22,805 from the bank between 1970 and 1973. Judge A. D. C. Washington deferred judgment until Wednesday.

The court was told George stole the money by signing documents to grant loans to people he claimed were clients.

Vancouver Faces 10% Tax Hike

VANCOUVER (CP) — City property taxes will increase more than 10 per cent this year unless the provincial government hands out more money to the municipalities, Mayor Art Phillips said Monday.

Phillips said the province should increase its per capita grant to municipalities by at least 10 per cent.

In addition, he said the municipality's share of natural gas revenues should also be increased 10 per cent.

Otherwise, Phillips said: "The provincial government will be shifting its problems to the property-owners."

Trucking Mediator

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams has appointed Ken Albertini to mediate the contract dispute between Transport Labor Relations (TRLA) and the Teamsters Union, a union official said Monday.

Doug McLeod, local 31 president, said he received a latter from Williams notifying him of the mediator's appointment.

McLeod said the 97 companies in the management group asked for the appointment. he said strike votes scheduled this weekend in Vancouver and Nanaimo will go ahead as planned.

Teamsters' Union locals 31 and 213, representing 5,500 workers, served strike notice on the companies last December.

TLRA, bargaining agent for the trucking companies, has offered the union a one-year increase of 10 per cent, saying that is the maximum premitted by federal anti-inflation guidlines.

Neale Appeal Dismissed, Lee Retains Federal Seat

VANCOUVER (CP) — Two British Columbia supreme court judges Monday upheld the 1974 federal election of Art Lee as the Liberal member for Vancouver East.

Chief Justice Nathan Nemetz and Mr. Justice Davie Fulton dismissed a petition from Paddy Neale, former New Democratic Party MP, to have the election voided because of irregularities. Final results had given Lee a 57-vote margin.

The judges found that all but one of the five instances of irregular procedure cited by Neale's counsel either were without merit or could not have significantly affected the outcome of the vote.

They did not consider evidence regarding 378 voters alleged to have voted in the advanee poll without having sworn the required affidavit, or having sworn defective affidavits.

In an interview Monday, Neale said his "personal inclination" is to accept the judgment as final. He said he would have to consult with his lawyer but likely will not appeal.

Neale said he has made no final decision on whether he will seek to re-enter politics, but added. "I'll be 57 when the next election rolls around and my inclination is that it's a young persons' job.

He said he expected the decision to go against him.

"I sat in that courtroom for 4½ days — but I won't make any commentss because I've been in contempt of court before," he said.

"I couldn't have had two better judges as far as being apolitical goes. I got as fair a shake as I could possibly get."

Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved . . . actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

And most important—this improvement was maintained in cases where clinical observations were continued over a period of many months. Furthermore, these tests and observations were made on patients with a wide variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. All this was accomplished with a healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a stated cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Council Rejects Appeal To Ban Lounge Liquor

Opponents of liquor being served in Oak Bay Recreation Centre's "social lounge" received a unanimous rejection from council Monday night.

The opponents included the Victoria presbytery of the United Church, Oak Bay United Church and petitions signed by 91 persons.

Five persons, including three United Church ministers, spoke against liquor being served in the lounge and four persons spoke in favor.

The opponents said liquor breaks up families, causes traffic accidents and divides children and adults at the centre. They also said council never asked for public approval.

Supporters said there has been no rowdiness or drunkenness and one of them, Anne Buie, said having no liquor at the centre isn't going to change family situations — this was a bigger problem than council could cope with.

Ald. Norm Pimlott emphasized that the lounge is open to people of all ages between 11 a.m. and 6 p.m. Monday to Friday, and liquor is only served between 6 p.m. and midnight. Saturdays are for rentals and no liquor is served Sundays.

"If the majority of the people did not want a bar, we would hear about it," he said.

Ald. John Goult said people's conduct in the lounge has been exemplary and "we have yet to find a reason to close the bar."

Mayor Brian Smith said 60 per cent of lounge time does not see liquor served. Liquor had been served for four months and "where have the objectors been?"

He said there have been no complaints from the centre staff or from police.

Ald. Doug Watts said he could see "no reason whatsoever to change the mode of operation."

Council then agreed there will be no change to the social lounge and all correspondence was received and filed.

Rights Body Formed In City

An international human rights organization formed to put pressure on governments to free political prisoners has started a branch in Victoria.

Amnesty International will operate from the Pearson College of the Pacific at Peddar Bay and concentrate on freedom of three political prisoners in Uruguay, Indonesia and Russian who say they have been denied freedom of speech and thought.

Organizer Mark McAvity said the Indonesian prisoner, a middle-aged woman, has been in jail for 10 years without trail.

Those interested in joining the group, which is not limited to student membership, are to contact him at the college.

Hotel Change Study

Changes in plans for renovations to Oak Bay Beach Hotel will be examined by a committee of Oak Bay council.

Council Monday night gave the committee power to act.

The committee reported to council that one dormer was being reconstructed at the hotel which was now shown in original plans and an additional window installed without council approval.

The changes did not increase the number of suites but enlarged one by placing a bedroom above the living room.

Represenatives of the hotel told council work had been stopped until the matter can be sorted out.

Ald. Doug McLelland proposed that the modifications not be approved, but he found no seconder to his motion.

An another matter related to the hotel, council was told by a committee that the police department will speak to management of the liquor lounge and request tighter control on serving patrons already inebriated.

Complaints had been received by one alderman about noise coming from patrons leaving the pub and in one case there was a disturbance which led to an injury.

Parking Ban Soon

Oak Bay council approved a committee recommendation Monday night banning parking during weekday rush hours on alternating sides of Henderson Road.

Council members pointed out later that an amendment now must be passed by council to the streets and traffic bylaw to implement the decision. This may take two weeks.

Parking will be banned between 8 and 10 a.m. on the east side of Henderson and between 3 and 5 p.m. on the west side, Monday to Friday.

BUDGET 'DISMAY'

An Oak Bay alderman said Monday night he is "dismayed" that Greater Victoria school board approved a budget containing a 20 per cent increase while the student population had declined by 600.

He said Oak Bay faced some big cost increases this year but some of them, such as the recreation centre, are tied to new services.

TOWN TALK

Just before the demonstration was to start, guards called in a tow truck to remove a luxurious, midnight blue Cadillac parked in the driveway in front of the Legislative Buildings.

Security officials apparently felt the Caddy might prove too tempting to the mostly under-25 crowd protesting the doubling and in some case tripling of insurance premiums.

Perhaps it wasn't just the opulence of the car the guards were thinking of — on its bumper, evident as it disappeared out of sight behind the tow truck, was a sticker reading Social Credit Party of B.C.

It's only eight years to 1984 when the Big Brother society predicted by George Orwell will be upon us. But maybe that fateful day has already arrived.

At the same demonstration Friday the eyes and camera lens of the law were on the protesters who were organized by the B.C. Federation of Labor and Concerned Citizens of B.C.

The man with the camera was Sgt. Pat Braiden, head of the Victoria city police identification section.

It was an ironic choice to send Braiden for he's also head of the city policemen's union. He was placed in the position of having to spy on his "brothers" in the union movement.

He says demonstrations are "always cause for concern" and police "want to know what transpires."

"It's the same as any investigative practice," he adds, without saying who the complainant was or why a peaceful demonstration needs to be investigated.

What happens to the pictures?

"They're held for police purposes," says Mottershead.

And you'll have to draw your own conclusions as to just what that means.

HUMPHREYS
. . . all systems go

You're wondering why Victoria Symphony concert master Sydney Humphreys had two violins on stage with him at Sunday's and Monday's concerts?

No, nothing was in danger of breaking down and no, he wasn't testing.

For the violin solo passages in the second movement of the Mahler fourth symphony, the composer specifically directed that the instrument should be tuned a full tone higher than normal.

The scherzo's theme — death strikes up a tune — is treated humorously by Mahler who desired a thin, eerie solo sound.

Obviously it is impossible to tune and re-tune a fiddle in full flight as it were, hence two fiddles for the concert master-soloist.

★ ★ ★

The students had set out to learn the letter "h" and in the course of the trip they visited the Strathcona Hotel.

After the picture appeared Coleen got a phone call from a woman who shouted that she had no right to be a teacher, was not fit to teach children and had no respect for the value of property — all because she allowed one of her students to bounce on the bed.

Coleen said it was explained to all the kids that the bouncing was only allowed for the special purpose of a picture. The small boy who bounced had his shoes off and didn't hurt anything.

Coleen finally hung up the phone when the caller started to swear at her.

"The thing is that the children behaved beautifully that day. We had a beautiful day," said Coleen.

And Times city editor Lon Wood had a call from a child psychologist who berated him for 15 minutes for allowing such a picture to get into the paper.

There'll be no more smoke to accompany the hot air in Saanich council chamber.

The anti-smokers beat out the smokers 5-4 Monday when Ald. Roy Wootten pushed through a motion to ban smoking in the chamber.

But the smokers didn't go down without a fight.

Ald. Sandy Noel said the ban should apply throughout the hall, otherwise it was discriminating.

Ald. Fred Severson said the ban would discriminate against residents who attended council meetings and wanted to smoke.

"Why is the Pizza Pieman making such a great offer?" said the ad in last Saturday's Times. "Because he's proud of his two restaurants and wants you to join in the family fun," was the reply.

The reassurance apparently convinced at least some readers who wondered if the offer was too good to be true.

It contained two cut-out coupons, prominently labelled $4.95, with the wording on each stating: "This coupon good for" either a pizza or spaghetti dinner for two, including green salad and garlic toast with the latter plus free beverage.

Trouble was, someone in the advertising agency, Truman Glover Advertising, had left two important little words out of the ad. It should have read something like: "This coupon and $4.95 good for . . ."

Pizza Pieman manager Bob Darnell says the error was spotted almost immediately, and steps taken to correct it before its next appearance in Sunday's Colonist.

But meanwhile several hungry people has turned up at the restaurants in the Town and Country shopping centre and James Bay, coupon in hand.

He said in-store signs had been erected to try to save any misunderstandings, and waitresses were instructed to warn customers before they ordered that the coupon's wording was misleading.

"I don't know about the legality, but that was the approach I had taken," he added. A retraction ad is to be published Wednesday, the day before the offer expires.

Most customers accepted the explanation, said Darnell, but one male pizza lover "took considerable exception" and wanted to argue the point at length.

"The whole thing caused us an awful lot of ill will, frustration and confusion," he admitted.

Price Watch Sought

Trustee Peter Bunn wants the school board to set up a special committee to monitor prices of goods and services paid for by the board.

In a notice of motion at Monday's meeting, Bunn said it is "desirable and feasible" that a monitoring committee be established.

Those goods and services judged in excess of realistic prices, especially in light of federal guidelines, would be reported to the board for action.

Notice of motion will be discussed fully at next month's board meeting, along with several motions by other trustees, including:

That a committee be set up to study future staffing requirements in light of economic restraints, put forward by Trustee Susan Brice;

Crabfest In U.S. Pinches Island Exports

Huge catches of Dungeness crab being caught off California, Oregon and Washington are hurting the Vancouver Island crab export industry.

A spokesman for Dennis Shellfish Co. Ltd. of Victoria said the American boom has depressed the market, bringing prices down in the export trade. Locally, whole crabs are selling for $1.29 a pound.

The spokesman said it just isn't worthwhile trying to compete in the American market.

"We are told by our people in Seattle that, adding freight costs, there is no way we can stay competitive," he said.

Dungeness crab is a year-round fishery in Canada but, because of poor stocks in the past, the American season begins in December, ending in early summer.

Some American crabmen are disgruntled because wholesalers are putting daily and weekly limits on the amounts they buy because they say it's all the market can absorb.

"This season has just been wild, unbelievable," says Lawrence Lazio of the Tom Lazio Fish Co. in Eureka. "Last year at this time we had less than 125,000 pounds of crab. This year, I'd estimate we've already had seven to nine million pounds. The crabs just keep marching in . . . more and more."

★

Both the Dennis Shellfish spokesman and federal fisheries officer Lloyd Gudewill attribute the huge American catches to crab migrations.

The Dennis Shellfish spokesman said the Alaskan King crab also follows the migration pattern.

"They move in what are called pods," he said. "A pod can be 40 feet wide and 20 feet deep. They mass close together, probably for protection."

Although Canadian catches are lean in comparison with the American ones, Gudewill says there have been similar bonanzas here.

"About 10 to 15 years ago, probably more like 15, draggers were bringing them in by the ton; most of them were taken off Long Beach (on the west coast of Vancouver Island)", he recalled.

Mayor Fears 'Barkerville' If Fire Standards Enforced

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

City aldermen expressed concern today that Victoria could face a housing crisis of major proportions through rigid enforcement of fire safety standards in the 1975 National Building Code.

Unless Attorney-General Garde Gardom instructs the provincial fire marshal to allow municipal fire chiefs more discretion in ordering provements to older buildings, thousands of tenants could find themselves out on the streets, they said.

Commented Mayor Mike Young: "I think it would be fair to say that this has the potential of making downtown Victoria a 20th century Barkerville."

He added: "It makes it almost necessary to recall some of our tents from Guatemala."

The discussion arose from a report by Fire Chief Eric Simmons that fire marshal Henry K. Jenns in Vancouver, had quashed an appeal by a local hotel owner against an order to upgrade his building to meet fire-safety standards.

The ruling supports an earlier order issued by Simmons, who said he is under instructions to withhold the name of the owner concerned.

The owner must comply with the order delivered today by March 31, or he has the right to launch a further appeal to the county court.

Unless the eight ordered improvements to the building, including structural alterations and installation of fire detection equipment, have been implemented by the March 31 deadline, the owner will be taken to court.

A further 11 owners of downtown apartments and hotels who have also appealed their upgrading orders will be handled individually by the fire marshal, Simmons said.

In all, 30 such orders were issued by his department. The first 26 of these involved a total of 947 tenants.

'Put 1,000 on the Street'

Ald. Bob Wright was shocked to learn how many low-income renters could be displaced, if the building owners concerned decided that the ordered improvements would be too costly.

"It's absolutely ridiculous when we already have a housing crisis in Victoria that these people can turn around, look at a regulation book and some bureaucrat can interpret the regulations to put 1,000 people on the street," he said.

"I don't understand how it got to this point where we can even consider such a thing . . . these people have lived in these buildings for 40 years and they are still alive."

Housing committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier pointed out that the total effect on the city's housing stock would be far-reaching, because the regulations can be applied to every type of housing down to duplex level.

He noted that with the 1975 building code used as the standard, even relatively modern apartment buildings like the Lord Simcoe in James Bay do not conform. In some cases the cost of carrying out the safety measures could amount to $25 per square foot.

Glazier said the city's hands are tied, for Simmons is the fire marshal's deputy and he has no option but to enforce the regulations.

The fire marshal's latest ruling had removed the hope that some compromise could be reached in the case of older buildings, by allowing the owners to install sprinkler systems — a measure which Vancouver had adopted.

Ald. Alf Hood said last fall former mayor Peter Pollen and the fire chief had tried to express the city's concerns to the assistant deputy attorney-general, who had promised to review the situation.

But the quashed appeal indicates that nothing came of that investigation.

On Young's suggestion, the committee instructed city manager Jim Bramley to prepare a brief outlining the total extent of the problem, which can form the basis for discussions with the cabinet ministers.

Strike Favored at Inn

The 72-hour strike notice will be served on inn management by Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union either later today or Wednesday, union business agent Tony Gerussi said today.

Provincial mediator Ken Albertini is still involved in negotiation efforts at the inn and strike action is prohibited until Albertini files his final report with the provincial labor department.

The previous contract, covering the 20 employees, expired Dec. 31 and the union wants the new contract to run only until April 30, the expiry date of other hotel and restaurant contracts in the Victoria area.

The union is seeking a 15 cents an hour increase on the base rate of $3.13 an hour.

Beery 'Mutt and Jeff' Rob City Drug Store

Two men wearing baseball caps and nylon pantyhose over their faces — "and reeking of beer" — held up the James Bay United Pharmacy, 230 Menzies, Monday and escaped with $325.

The men, described by Victoria police as a "Mutt and Jeff" team, entered the store at 5:45 p.m. just 15 minutes before closing time, approached clerk Ruth Ridley and demanded money from the till.

Ms. Ridley said today the smaller of the two had his arm inside in his jacket as if simulating a weapon and waved it at her.

She said she tried to stall, but the gunman poked his arm towards her and said gruffly: "Hurry up lady."

She said the two "reeked of beer" but weren't drunk.

"They were belligerent, mean and I think also very scared."

She handed the money in the cash drawer and the men told her to get the "big bills" under the coin tray. She did but stalled while she separated the cheques from the money.

The taller of the two grew impatient, grabbed the bills from her hand and the pair fled.

During the holdup assistant pharmacist Colleen Hicks in a back room saw what was going on and started to phone police. But the men spotted her and ordered her up to the front counter before she could complete dialing.

Pharmacist Gerry Lundgren said he was at the back of the store during the holdup.

He said shortly before the holdup he had received two or three telephone calls from a man wanting to know when the pharmacy closed for the night.

"It was unusual to get that number," Lundgren said. "I think one of the men was probably checking us out."

Cabinet Approves Salt Spring Thaw

A subdivision bylaw on Salt Spring Island passed earlier by the Capital Regional Board has been given cabinet approval, effectively lifting the former 10-acre minimum, board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

"The bylaw permits implementation of the first stage of the Salt Spring Island community plan," he said. "And the purpose of the plan is to ensure a rational and acceptable level of development on the island."

He said one of the interesting aspects of the bylaw is that it allows subdivisions on average-sized lots instead of minimum size lots.

"This means in many instances the average size lot will be five acres or even more," he said. "At the same time it allows for smaller lots which will be within the means of the average person."

He conceded that not all residents are pleased with the bylaw and would have preferred the freeze to remain.

"But it is a step forward and most people are in favor of it," he said.

388-3711 For Price Complaints

The Anti-Inflation Board hot line was a little hotter than expected this morning until somebody figured out it was a wrong number.

The number appearing in Victoria newspapers this week was something else.

In fact it was the number for the reserve training section of CFB Esquimalt. The girls at that number were a little confused as to why they were receiving so many calls about high prices in Victoria until they figured out it was a wrong number.

Gas-Saver Didn't Do Job, Court Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

An expert witness in engine testing told Victoria county court Monday he could not substantiate claims of increased horsepower and gasoline mileage after installation of an air induction valve called Ball-Matic.

Martin Friend, a technical officer at the National Research Council in Ottawa and in charge of its fuels and lubricants laboratory and engine testing section, was testifying in the trial of Glen Edward Clarke, 1331 Vining.

Clarke, carrying on business as Turbo Sales, is accused under a section of the Combines Investigation Act dealing with false advertising of making statements in April, 1974, which "purported to be statements of fact but were untrue."

The indictment alleges the statements were made in a weekly entertainment magazine This Week, with a circulation of 215,000, to promote the sale of Ball-Matic Air Injectors.

The statements recorded in the indictment are:

1. "Increase horsepower . . . Gas Mileage."

2. "Makes your carburetor breathe deeper . . . use more air, less gas."

3. "Now — you can enjoy a marvellous new kind of power — astonishing pep — Get Up and Go and save money too."

Michael John Poulton, first witness in the two-day trial, said he responded to the advertisement and received an air injector for which he paid $18.90, covering purchase price and sales tax.

Poulton, an investigator with the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department, sent the device to the mechanical engineering division of the National Research Council for tests.

Friend, who made the tests, said the device had "no significant effect on the manifold vacuum" and "only insignificant effect" on fuel flow.

He said the Ball-Matic Air Injector was, technically, not an injector but an induction valve.

Fitted in the carburetor of an engine, it is supposed to increase the air supply at higher speeds as the manifold vacuum decreases. It consists of a chamber with a plastic ball which covers an opening.

He contrasted the device to a supercharger, which, he said, together with other necessary modificatjons to an engine, would cost $600 to $800.

He said he would not expect the Ball-Matic to make any difference because the amount of air induced would be small compared with normal air flow.

"If it sucked a vast amount of air you would see a change in engine operation immediately," he told Judge Montague Drake.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Friend agreed he wasn't given information on the kind of car for which the device was ordered, a 1966 Pontiac. The test was done on a 1961 283-cubic-inch V-8 General Motors engine.

He agreed he had done tests on a device called Mini Turbo Charger, used for the same purpose, and that he drew essentially the same conclusions.

But, he said, he made no direct comparisons between the two.

Asked about tests done by an American company called Fema Corporation which claimed the Mini could produce 16.7 per cent more miles to a gallon of gas, Friend said he disputed the manner in which those tests were conducted and did not consider them adequate for a comparative test.

Nothing Wrong with Alimony

NEW YORK (NYT) — Are feminists opposed to alimony?

Apparently many of them are, or think they should be, and that applies to both younger and older women.

Should feminists be opposed to alimony?

A number of feminist lawyers who handle divorce cases answer with an emphatic "No."

"I don't think what feminism is about, or what the women's movement is about, is giving up what we theoretically have," said Emily Goodman, who will handle only women in divorce cases.

But what is alimony? It is, today, rarely a lifetime annuity, particularly for younger women. And it is rarely perceived as such by women involved in divorce.

An increasing number of younger women, with and without children, and some of their older counterparts are asking for a division of assets and for support for a limited time to enable them to complet their education or train for jobs.

Miss Goodman, who has been practicing since 1968, said she did not believe in economic dependence on anybody, but that independence must be measured against certain frameworks.

"The reality of our economic and social structure is that women have been made economically dependent on men," she said, "and it is the exceptional situation where women have achieved economic independence."

A number of feminist lawyers agreed that many of their divorce clients were intimidated by the "myth" that feminists are opposed to alimony.

"Some women are embarrassed to ask for it, they are defensive about it, and apologetic," Miss Goodman said.

"I'm not sure a lot come in asking for it, but I sure suggest it," said Kristin Booth Glen, a self-described radical feminist who handles divorce cases.

"If you get away from the word alimony, the concept is a fair one," according to Diane Blank, a ppartner in the feminist law firm of Blank, Goodman, Rone & Stanley.

Miss Blank prefers to think of alimony as deferred compensation for contributions to the home. Janice Goodman, another partner in the firm, calls it severence or retirement pay. Miss Glen finds "maintenance" a more acceptable word.

The lawyers outlined three situations common to many of their clients.

In one, a young woman dropped out of school and took a job to put her husband through college.

"He acquires a profession, affluence, status and, most important, future income which she will not be part of — and no one will compensate her for the loss of education," Miss Goodman said. "These women may look for compensation, reparation — a lump sum or a certain amount to get them resettled — and then a certain number of years' support while they get their clubs, taking part in certain education and train themselves in a profession."

In another situation, a young woman continued with her job after marriage.

"The chances are that she has not only been working at her job outside the home, but at the homemaking job inside the home," Miss Blank said. She's had two jobs and there's a feeling she should be compensated for it. In these cases, she usually doesn't want support, except perhaps for a short period to get herself together."

The third situation is that of an older woman who worked in business with her husband and never got paid, or who invested her life in her husband's career, joining certain activities, entertaining, etc.

One of the lawyers said: "If she helped him build up a business, there should be a buying out arrangement of not only half the value of the business but of the income the business is still producing. If she's helped build up his career, it's the same as a business — she's entitled to an income from it."

Kristen Glen noted that very often alimony, particularly in New York, was a distribution of assets accumulated during the years of marriage but held in the man's name. The courts in New York can't dispose of property; if all the assets are in the husband's name, the court cannot give the wife any percentage.

"We live in a patriarchy where women are traditionally discriminated against," Miss Glen continued. "One example might be the 55-year-old woman who helped her husband build his business, and who raised the kids, and then gets divorced. If two men had been in business all those years, there would be some kind of arrangement where each would get a share of the business and the income would go on. But the woman, even if she gets something out of it, loses it the minute she remarries."

Risky Foods

CALGARY (CP) — Foods such as eggs, meat, butter and cream can increase the risk of heart attack, a consulting nutritionist says.

Bunny Barss of Calgary told a public meeting sponsored by the Alberta Heart Foundation eggs are high in cholesterol and meat, butter and cream have high levels of animal fats.

Mrs. Barss said the ingredients contribute to high blood-cholesterol, which leads to atherosclerosis, hardening of the arteries, which underlies most heart attacks and strokes.

She said Canadians can reduce their risk of heart attack by following a diet designed to control cholesterol levels.

It also helps, she said, to avoid overweight, exercise regularly, avoid smoking and obtain treatment immediately for high blood pressure and diabetes.

Mrs. Barss said the average man needs 2,600 calories a day.

Here's a Handy Fire Extinguisher

We all know that we should have a fire extinguisher or two in the kitchen, another in the car and yet others within handy reach in the shop, barn, etc. Few of us do because . . . well, because . . . the dang things are too big and bulky . . . and they have to be recharged . . . and they cost too much.

O.K. Right now, today. You're going to go out and buy a whole half dozen compact, low-cost, ever-ready fire extinguishers. They'll wiegh one pound each (so they're not too large), they'll never have to be recharged (so there's no objection there) and they'll cost a grand total of less than $2.00 (you can panhandle that much in an hour, for crying out loud).

Talking 'bout — are you ready? — baking soda. Good . . . old . . . baking soda . . . in one-pound cardboard boxes. It'll set you back only about thirty-one cents a container and each carton contains enough powder to douse almost any young fire you're ever likely to encounter in the kitchen, basement, home shop or outomobile. How? By generating flame-snuffing carbon dioxide when sprinkled on a blaze.

Now. To prevent moisture from caking the soda over the years (and to keep the weak-willed at your house from using the contents of the fire extinguishers for other purposes), protect each box of the powder in a tightly sealed, double wrap of aluminum foil. Then glue a band of red paper around every package or clearly label the foil on the individual boxes (with something like a magic marker) "FOR FIRE ONLY."

Put one of the soda containers in the kitchen, another in the bedroom, a third in the basement, a fourth in your home workshop, a fifth in the car glove compartment and carry the sixth on your tractor (or put it in the baby's room, near the heat lamps in the barn during spring farrowing, in the chicken house next the brooder stove, etc.).

At the first sign of fire, grab the nearest box of soda, tear off the protective foil and sprinkle the powder over the blaze. It won't take much, so spread the soda thin. As the powder hits the flames, it'll produce a dense cloud of carbon dioxide that will quickly extinguish grease, electrical and most other kinds of fire . . . all for thirty-five cents (counting foil) or less a shot.

Remember now . . . do it TODAY!

Fun But No Benefits

DEAR ABBY: Couples living together without marriage is a bummer. In cases where both parties invest in joint properties, if the man dies in an industrial accident, the woman can claim nothing. When the property goes to probate to pay off the bills, the woman is out of luck. Former wives, children and family can all claim a bigger share than this kind of "widow" can.

A good case was the woman who not only had one illegitimate child, but was carrying another. He always talked about marrying her, but never did. The husband-to-be was killed in a car wreck, wherein insurance could be claimed, but the woman had no legal standing.

If the man decides to "leave," the rejected woman must find another partner, but by that time, the woman has the reputation of a tramp.

Of course, if she can spawn enough children without matrimony, with Aid to Dependent Children, food stamps, low-cost housing and welfare, she can do pretty well and possibly even find a live-in boyfriend, which we taxpayers have to pay for. But the children from this unhappy mess is another matter, and your whole column could be filled with those problems. — MAGISTRATE IN ALASKA.

DEAR MAG: Yours is only one of 50 states that has its own laws regarding "common-law marriages." However, your timely warning concerning the new cultural phenomenon known as "shacking up" is appreciated, and I hereby pass it on.

DEAR ABBY: My wife of 14 years has suddenly developed a strong desire for children. Both of us would enjoy having a child; however, at this time in our lives (I am 50 and she is 42), do you think it's practical for us to take on the responsibility of raising a child?

My wife constantly argues that a child would bring needed happiness and a more youthful outlook on life for both of us.

I contend it's too late in life for us to start out with an infant, but I am willing to adopt a child of elementary school age or even one in his (or her) early teens.

Our clergyman favors adoption. My wife's physician says she is capable of having a child.

I am more inclined to adopt a child who needs a home, but my wife feels strongly about having her own.

Please give me your views. — ABLE BUT UNWILLING.

DEAR ABLE: Sorry, but this is one problem that you and your wife will have to solve yourselves. Some people are "old" at 30, and others are "young" at 60. It takes love, patience, understanding, determination, energy, fortitude, generosity and time to raise a child of any age. How much have you?

DEAR ABBY: This concerns people who never seem able to accept a compliment graciously: For years I was one of these people, and it took me a long time to understand why.

It goes back to my childhood. My family (bless them) never gave me an honest-to-goodness compliment. If I looked especially nice, they would say, "You look nice — but can't you do something else with your hair?" This made it impossible for me to say, "Thank you." Instead, I was always trying to make apologies and put myself down.

Compliments should be given freely and without little digs to spoil them. — "THANK YOU".

FREE FOR THE ASKING

The 6-page folder "Foods for Growing Boys and Girls" offer suggestions on how to feed your child. They supplement any instructions your physician may have given you and are intended merely as a guide to sound nutrition.

The folder explains that the normal development of a child depends on several factors, such as inherited physical characteristics, home conditions, rest, activity and wholesome food.

Parents should make every effort to have their children develop a taste for wholesome foods and discourage food prejudices.

The folder lists foods which should be included in the daily diet and indicates the right amounts for various ages from 3 and 15 years. It also lists a number of good sources of protein and how much protein an average serving contains.

As between-meal snacks fruit, plain crackers, pop-tarts or ready-to-eat cereals with milk are recommended.

Dental X-Rays Are Helpful

This is the second in a series of six articles on dental health published by the Victoria Times, in co-operation with the Victoria and District Dental Society, in observance of February as Dental Health Month.

Should X-rays be taken of my child's teeth? How often?

X-ray examinations of your child's teeth are very important. The dentist can only give him the best possible care by making X-ray examinations of the teeth and supporting structures when he feels such examinations are necessary.

The dentist needs to find out if your child has cavities between the teeth and whether or not there are any extra (super-numerary) teeth or other dental abnormalities. X-ray pictures will also reveal to the dentist whether the child's permanent teeth are present in the jaws and in the proper position.

As with adults, a dentist will make an X-ray examination only when it is absolutely necessary. However, dental x-ray examinations made with modern equipment and safeguards pose to proven danger to your child.

The Canadian Dental Association recommends the use of highspeed film, a beam that is properly restricted by collimation and filtration, and an open-ended, properly shielded cone to reduce scatter radiation.

In addition, the CDA advises that leaded aprons be used on all children and women of child-bearing age.

You can be sure that your child's dentist will not recommend the taking of X-rays unless he feels they are necessary for diagnosis and treatment.

She Sorts Out the Tangle of Ivy

family

NEW YORK (NYT) — Ivy, that favorite indoor-outdoor greenery, has grown in a tangle of assorted names and varieties for more than 50 years. To sort them all out there is a new American Ivy Society founded by Suzanne Pierot, wife, mother, author, and a gardening enthusiast who just happens to be fond of ivy.

A former press agent for Howard Hughes in England, Mrs. Pierot learned to enjoy ivy there.

"The English floral arrangements for the press parties and the dinners always had sprigs of ivy in them," she said in explaining how her interest in ivy developed. "Long after the flowers faded, the ivy was still green and I would put vases of it on my desk and around the rooms. It grows easily in water."

This is when she learned her first horticultural lesson.

"The ivy that rooted in the water did not make the transition into soil easily," she said. "Most of the plants died. There is a difference in the roots. Those developed in water are softer; they have a different molecular structure."

TOPIARY is the art of training ivy or other plants and here Suzanne Pierot, organizer of the American Ivy Society, works among her latest creations at her suburban New York home. Wife, mother, author and gardening enthusiast, Mrs. Pierot became interested in ivy after seeing it used in floral displays at press receptions in England, where she served as a press agent for Howard Hughes.

"To grow ivies in soil later on, the cuttings should be started in media such as vermiculite or perlite or the two mixed together. Then pot the cuttings in soil when the roots are strong. Of course, ivy can be grown in water continually, too."

In her present home in the New York suburbs, Mrs. Pierot grows ivy everywhere —in an old fish tank, on a closed-off porch which is her plant room, on a cold unheated back porch and in the kitchen.

"Ivy is easy to grow," she said. "Just keep it moist, and feed it fairly often."

"I learned everything I could—took courses at the Brooklyn Botanic Garden and at their Kitchawan Field Station. Ivy became the thing. This is when I began to be more and more convinced that there was a tangled mess in ivy nomenclature."

"You see; ivy has a tendency to sport. That is, a perfectly beautiful vine with the same sort of leaves will all of a sudden send off a shoot that will have leaves completely different from the mother plant. This is called a sport.

"A grower, finding a sport on one of his plants may propagate it and offer it as a new kind of ivy. Then sometimes the sport reverts back to the original. And then where are you?"

Mrs. Pierot estimated that there were 500 to 600 cultivated varieties of ivy in Hedera helix alone, the Latin name for ivy.

All this in-depth digging into ivy inspired her to do two important things: write "The Ivy Book," published by Macmillan, now in its second printing, and start the American Ivy Society, which now has 200 members in four chapters.

Welch Medical Report

By William J. Welch

(Dr. Welch is a practicing physician and an Associate Professor of Clinical Medicine.)

There has been a tendency lately on the part of some parents to sigh with relief when they discover their teenage children are drinking booze. They are falsely reassured by the notion that although their children are misbehaving, they are doing so in a traditional way: with alcohol and not with drugs.

Nothing could be further from the truth. There is nothing whatever that by any stretch of the imagination can be called reassuring about teen-age alcoholism. Nor does it mean that the abuse of drugs is being given up in favor of the more conventional abuse of alcohol.

In the first place, young people apparently have not given up the use of drugs as such. They have simply accepted alcohol into the drug culture. Alcohol is not often used along with other drugs and is itself classified in the underground as a "head" drug.

What this means is that alcohol is not used in its conventional form as an "ice breaker," or social lubricant, but rather as another variety of "trip," or drug experience, which is an end in itself.

Parents who grew up in the 1950s are particularly susceptible to inappropriate complacency concerning teen-age alcohol abuse because they tend to see it in the light of hazy memories of a time that included a semi-jocular notion that taking a drink was part of growing up.

But what they are not seeing is that among today's high school juniors and seniors, surveys show:

— that 30 per cent of the boys and nearly a fifth of the girls are "heavy drinkers" at least once a week;

— that 6 per cent of high school seniors drink alcohol every day of the week;

— that the fastest-growing group of drug users are in the group from 8 years of age to 14;

— and that 90 per cent of drug problems treated at rock concerts are related to acute alcoholic toxicity.

The ominous fact is that nobody knows how to control the consumption of alcohol among the young any more than we know how to control it among the so-called grownups. We only know that in both segments of our population the drinking of alcohol is out of control and that it is our number-one drug-abuse problem.

We are paying dearly for its annual toll in lost hours of productive work. Men and women by the million are suffering its calamitous effect on their livers and their lives. And each year we must accept the miserable fact of is massive contribution to the annual carnage and slaughter on our national highways.

In one study of teen-age drinking, only 12 per cent of those interviewed considered their drinking a problem. The anwers of most of them indicated that probably, like their parents, they looked on the use of alcohol purely as a diversion, that "celebrating" and "having a good time" were justification enough to drink, and if it happened to turn out that way — to overdrink.

Death Moved Faster Than Court

MIAMI — When Mabel Conyne died five years ago at the age of 83, she left $5,513 to a senior citizens' centre to buy a minibus for her elderly friends. But they were all dead by the time a court battle over her estate had ended.

The elderly people who were to have had use of the bus got a bad deal, said David Cerf, a lawyer representing Albert Trioani, whom Mrs. Conyne named to oversee purchase of the bus.

The minibus was eventually purchased, but it sat idle in the parking lot of Miami's Metropolitan Senior Centre for a while and then was leased to another organization.

Ten days ago, it was sold for $3,000, a little more than half its original price, and the cheque was presented to the clerk of the probate court.

MIAMI — Margaret Trudeau took her Cuban cigars to the swimming pool with her Monday, but said the best gift from her recent visit to Havana was that Cuban Premier Fidel Castro treated her as an equal.

people

"It was nice not to be looked at as a sex object or subject, but as an individual," said Mrs. Trudeau, wife of Prime Minister Trudeau.

Mrs. Trudeau, 27, was unrecognized by other sunbathers at the pool of a secure condominium building on Key Biscayne, where she was visiting friends.

MOSCOW — Changes reported today in the Communist party leadership in the Ukraine apparently signal new power for Vladimir Shcherbitsky, a protege of Leonid Brezhnev.

The Ukraininan Pravda said Ivan Sokolov was named second secretary of the Ukrainian politburo, replacing Ivan Lutak. Sokolov was also elevated from candidate to full member of the local politburo.

OTTAWA — A navigation device, dating back to 1613 and once belonging to Samuel de Champlain, the first governor of Canada, was presented Monday to Gov.-Gen. Jules Leger.

The device, an astrolabe, was used by early mariners to calculate the time and their location.

The presentation was made by Dr. David Baird, director of the National Museum of Science and Technology, at Government House.

VATICAN CITY — Pope Paul has named Most Rev. Basil Hume to be the new Archbishop of Westminster, the spiritual head of the 2.5 million Roman Catholics in England and Wales, the Vatican announced today.

He replaces John Cardinal Heenan who died Nov. 7 at the age of 70.

TV'S ANGIE WINS AWARD

HOLLYWOOD — Actress Angie Dickinson was named "Woman of the Year" Monday by the Hollywood Radio and Television Society for the success of her television series "Policewoman."

Honors List Inquiry Demanded

LONDON (Reuter) — Queen Elizabeth's most outspoken critic, working-class politician Willie Hamilton, has demanded an inquiry into Britain's honors system under which a wide range of people are given chivalrous-sounding titles.

Hamilton, 59-year-old son of a coal miner, is well known for his lectures, statements and a recent book advocating republicanism — despite an old law that allows members of Parliament to be placed in the Tower of London for showing disrespect to the monarch.

Now this Scottish member of the Labor party wants a committee of the House of Commons to investigate exactly how the knighthoods and Orders of the British Empire and so on are distributed.

He claims it has all become a joke. He also alleges that Prime Minister Wilson, who plays a part in recommending honors, is giving them out to his friends.

Wilson has vigorously defended himself, stating that he once rejected a recommendation for his sister, Marjorie Wilson, to be made a member of the Order of the British Empire for her work in education.

"I rejected it simply because it was my sister," he said, adding that Edward Heath, then prime minister, received the same recommendation two years later and acceded to it.

ROLLING STONE

Led Zeppelin lead-singer Robert Plant made the most out of his last days in the States. Before flying home to England February 4, he saw Deep Purple in New York, caught two L.A. shows by a teen-age, girl rock group called the Runaways, and spent a night bantering with Richard Pryor at a Hollywood club. One of his final stops was Berkeley, where he caught the Pretty Things, the British band that Plant and fellow Zepper Jimmy Page brought to their label, Swan Song Records, a year ago.

Making the most out of this last chance to talk to Plant about his health (he was still walking with the help of a leg brace), his convalescence in Malibu, Led Zep's new album, "Presence" (which will ship platinum in March), and the group's plans, we approached him in the Pretty Things' dressing room. He happily agreed to a quick interview, the first he's given since breaking his ankle and elbow in that auto accident last August.

Q: How are you feeling?

Plant: Well, doctor, everything's improving better than expected. I've slowly put more weight on my foot until New Year's Eve, when I just threw down my crutch and walked without it for the first time.

Q: Why did you choose to rest up in L.A.? You said a year ago you had become bored with the city.

Plant: I felt a lot of negativity had set in . . . the presence of a lot of people doing a lot of dope. Bit by bit I saw the shine on the surface fade away. But when we stayed in Malibu, my trip was to develop a state of mind whereby I could combat the physical problems. Malibu is good for that.

Q: A Led Zeppelin tour has been ruled out until next year. So what are your plans?

Plant: We can't think now towards the future as easily as we could in six months time. All we want to do is see the people that we love. And I want to take it easy with this foot. No soccer until August.

★ ★ ★

A few weeks back, L.A. promoter Bill Sargeant offered the ex-Beatles $30 million for a reunion concert. While mega-dollar guarantees to the former Fab Four had fallen on deaf ears in the past, two ears —George Harrison's — perked up this time. "I'd do it if the others would," George told the London Daily Mirror. "I'm not going to say no to a share of $30 million." But don't get your hopes up, Beatle buffs; we talked to John Lennon the other day and his only comment was, "How do you spell Sargeant?" . . . On the other hand, Bob Dylan's saying his Rolling Thunder Revue will hit the road again in April: ". . . sooner or later they're all going to see us. We're going to go everywhere," he's told one reporter.

★ ★ ★

"It blew me away! I always watched those that were on television, I didn't miss a single one . . . but being there is just an incredibly moving experience." That's the way John Denver, who gets high on more than Rocky Mountains and marijuana, described the Apollo launch he attended last summer. Denver made the comment at a recent board meeting of the National Space Institute in Washington, which he'd sat in on as an observer (flying in from Colorado in his Lear jet). After listening to polysyllabic presentations on "Satellite Solar Power Stations" and "Space Colony Concepts," Denver said he'd love to travel to a space colony one day: "It'd thrill me to death!"

Feeding Time for Fruit Trees

Any fertilizer reaching the feeding roots later has no effect on the current season's crop. Applied late, its main action is to improve the color of fruits, but at the same time it decreases storage life of the fuit.

This is one of the main problems when fruit trees are planted in a lawn area. The fertilizer that is put on the grass every 30 days from April to September, is picked up by the tree, causes excessive growth and pruning problems, and the gardener finds the stored fruit suddenly going rotten before Christmas.

The general recommendation for mature trees in local orchards is a fertilizer high in nitrogen because available nitrogen is leached from our soils by heavy winter rainfall.

But conditions in a home garden can be quite different to an orchard, since as assortment of plants, including grass, are grown in a limited space.

These other plants receive fertilizer at various dates, and fertilizer also reaches the area in soil water from neighboring gardens.

Each gardener, therefore, has to assess the conditions existing in his own plot, and his fertilizer program is determined by his findings.

If fertilizer is needed, as indicated by poor growth, it is better to use a mix in which the nitrogen, which stiulates soft growth, is offset by an equal amount of potash which hardens such growth and prevents unwanted excess, plus a reasonably high percentage of phosphoric acid to encourage production of flowers and seeds, in other words, fruits.

Young trees, prior to bearing age, should always have this type of balanced fertilizer; old trees, making little new growth, can stand higher nitrogen.

Since the fertilizer applied in late February must reach the feeding roots before the trees leaf-out in order to improve the current year's crop, it is better to apply it in holes six inches deep, then to spread it on the surface.

While the amount to apply varies somewhat with different mixes, we generally figure one pound for every inch of trunk diameter (not circumference) at the four-foot level.

To distribute this amount equally over the entire root area, holes are punched in the soil with a wrecking bar or similar tool, eight inches apart in circles, starting about two feet from the trunk and continuing to the outermost spread of branches.

Into each hole goes a measured amount of fertilizer, possibly one measuring teaspoonful, starting from the row nearest the trunk. When all holes have been treated, surplus is divided equally and added, starting at the outer row, because most feeding roots are at the extreme edge of the foliage spread.

Each hole is then filled with water from the garden hose to dissolve the fertilizer crystals. This also washes a little soil into each hole.

Some gardeners then cultivate the surface to loosen the soil for easier rain penetration, others leave it as is. The main object is to get the fertilizer into the soil before the end of February.

HOW TO WRITE A GOOD CLASSIFIED ACTION AD

1—IT'S BEST to start your ad with the name of the article or service you have to offer. If you have an apartment, room etc., for rent, or property for sale; start your ad with the location.

2—BE CLEAR. Readers respond more quickly and favorably when given complete, definite information. Always include the price in your advertisement.

3—MAKE IT EASY for the reader-prospect to reach you. Always give your telephone number or your name and address. If you do not have regular hours, state a preferred time for the prospect to get in touch with you.

4—PLAY SAFE. You get the greatest reader attention by using consecutive insertions. A six-day order is best and costs less, and you can, of course, stop your ad as soon as you get the results you want. You pay only for the days your ad appeared. Lower yearly rates are available to those who wish to keep their services or products before the public.

5—PLACE YOURSELF in the reader's position and ask yourself what you want to know about your offer. The answer you give will make a good Want Ad.
Don't allow the reader to speculate.

5—GIVE YOUR PROSPECT every inducement you can with good copy. Classified action ad readers have the money and are already interested in buying the merchandise or service you have to offer; the details and information you give are the most important.

6—TO PLACE YOUR AD, call 386-2121, your direct line number to fast Want Ad action. A courteous, efficient advisor will be glad to help you word and place your order. And remember, Classified Action Ads afford bring the desired results do so you the most complete coverage. Telephones are open 8:00 a.m. to 6:00 p.m. for you daily, Monday through Saturday call:

Carpet of Red Ink from 'Rolling Thunder'

By DONALD MACDONALD
Times London Bureau

LONDON — Operation Rolling Thunder, as some critics have dubbed Concorde, is giving Britain's taxpayers a continuing headache with no foreseeable end.

This nickname for Britain's supersonic aircraft was first used by Lyndon Johnson's generals as a code name for heavy bombing of North Vietnam.

Hanoi's dread at the approach of the Phantoms and the B-52s is being relived by British taxpayers who see a carpet of Concorde red, ink floating down on them from its 60,000-feet operational height.

After the trauma of the Washington hearings, in which support for Concorde became wrapped in the Union Jack and the British equivalent of mom and apple pie, the news is leaking out that almost nobody wants to fly in Britain's air-borne miracle with the dropping nose.

On running costs between London and Bahrain, first route for Concorde, weekly losses are $100,000.

British businessmen and rich Arabs are democratically voting with their wallets not to pay $1,352 to fly in a cramped Concorde seat when they can fly in first-class subsonic wide-seat comfort for only $1,176.

On the Jan. 21 inaugural flight to Bahrain, when caviar-stuffed and champagne-sodden journalists repaid their free trip by writing of the glorious silence and remarkable vibration-free ride 11 miles high at twice the speed of sound, 99 of the 100 passenger seats were filled.

But when freeloaders like the Duchess of Argyll and the Duke of Kent got off in the searing heat of Bahrain, the stage was set for the first dash of cold, commercial water to be thrown on the project.

London-Bahrain bookings on Flight No. 2 were 79. On the next seven flights they were 46, 39, 40, 32, 39, 33 and 20.

Return flight No. 1 had 66 passengers. The second had 31, the third 47, the fourth 36, the fifth 41, the sixth 29.

As the average percentage of seats filled declined steeply, British Airways spokesmen said they were not calculating losses on each round trip. But other industry experts were, notably the irrespressible Freddie Laker, whose cheap-fare Sky Train scheme between London and New York has just been crushed by the British government because of British Airways pressure.

Laker said he could run Concorde for $9,200 an hour, a figure that caused one British Airways spokesman to sigh: "Lucky Freddie."

Rubbing the salt are the French, whose Concorde service from Paris to Rio is averaging 72 passengers a flight, figures that have encouraged Air France to plan a new Paris-Caracas Concorde service beginning April 9.

British Airways flies to an odd place like Bahrain because it is a way-station on the route to Melbourne, Australia, via Singapore.

India, however, is stalling on permission for Concorde to overfly at supersonic speeds. Already, Whitehall's snooty civil servants are leaking the same rumor they did in Washington — that Air India will suffer terribly in reprisal, as they said United States airlines would.

For the moment, India is ready to consider only subsonic overlights.

If British Airways can get Concorde to Singapore, the microscopic central Australia town of Alice Springs has generously offered to provide unlimited landing access, provided passengers do a quick tour of the local desert before taking an Australian domestic airline to the big cities 1,200 miles away.

As things now stand, passengers who make it to Bahrain arrive two hours earlier than those on subsonics. Because no continuing flight connects with Concorde's arrival time, the supersonic arrivals have the reward of spending an extra two hours in Bahrain airport.

"Believe me," said one British businessman well acquainted with these parts. "One hour in Bahrain airport is like one year on St. Helena."

REWARDED for their efforts to preserve part of the past, four British Columbians Monday received Heritage Canada recognition for restoring old homes and publishing on architecture and history. Heritage Canada governor Pierre Berton, right, made presentations in Empress Hotel to Carl Rudolph, left, who lives in Higgins Hall, Victoria; Archie Miller and Alan Woodward, of New Westminster, who have written books and broadcast; and Martin Segger, of Victoria, chairman of the city's heritage advisory committee, university and museum lecturer and co-author of the city's heritage building report. He won a three-week tour of any European country, Rudolph was given a plaque and the others citations.

The Bridge Expert

By FRED KARPIN

By FRED KARPIN D

When a defender exposes a card (either facing it on the table or holding it so that it is possible for his partner to see its face), that card becomes a penalty card. It now remains face up on the table, with declarer having various options as to its disposition. A few of the options availabe to declarer are that he may (1) require the guilty offender or his partner to lead the suit of that penalty card; or (2) he may prohibit the offender's partner from leading that suit for so long as the offender's partner has the lead. The penalty card remains on the table until such time as declarer chooses to exercise his option.

In today's deal, which was played in the 1975 National Championships, a penalty card enabled declarer to fulfill a slam contract that was unmakable.

★ ★ ★

East-West vulnerable. West deals.

West's opening heart lead was ruffed in dummy, declarer discarding the four of diamonds from his own hand. The ace of trumps was cashed next, and West discarded the deuce of hearts.

As declarer was about to lead the king of trumps, West said sheepishly: "I have a spade." So West followed suit with the four of trumps, with the deuce of hearts remaining on the table as a penalty card. Declarer now cashed the trump king, East discarding a heart as West played the six of spades.

Next came the king of clubs, East winning the trick with the ace. Now declarer took advantage of his option regarding West's penalty card of the deuce of hearts — he told West to pick up his penalty card and simultaneously required East to lead a heart. When he did, declarer discarded his remaining low diamond, as he ruffed the truck in dumy,

It should be mentioned that when a penalty card is on the table, it myst be played at the first legal opportunity. When declarer cashed his king of spades at trick three, had West possessed only one spade (instead of the two spades he actually held), he would have been compelled to play the epnalty card of the deuce of hearts. Declarer would then have had no options, with the play now proceeding as through nothing had happened.

'Reluctant' Approval For New Hospital Site

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Health Minister Bob McClelland has "reluctanly" agreed to purchase of a 25-acre site near Douglas and McKenzie for a new hospital and regional planners have asked him to expropriate the land.

But McClelland says that if the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission is determined on that site, he won't support provincial cost-sharing beyond $1.25-million, half the price the owners land is worth.

That would mean ratepayers in the Capital district could have to pay substantially more to finance the purchase.

The commission has countered by asking for provincial government expropriation of the property. This would lead to an independent board setting a fair market value, one the commission says the province and region could then share on the customary 60-40 formula.

The site lies northweast of the McKenzie-Douglas intersection on sloping land now within the Agricultural Land Reserve but surrounded by residential development and within the Saanich sewer enterprise.

Settling on a site for the planned acute care hospital, initially to have 300 beds, is a key planning decision which is currently delaying a number of other hospital plans.

The commission released copies of the letters today. McClelland is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

In his letter, the health minister repeated his concern about the cost of the property, earlier put at about $2.5 million by the region.

"I do not believe that I should encourage you to proceed with this proposed site acquisition at what appears to be an unreasonable price during this difficult period of financial restraint," he says in part.

But he adds:

"In the event that your commision insists you are so deeply 'locked into' the McKenzie-Douglas site that you feel you cannot change your recommendation, I reluctantly make the following proposal.

"I would be prepared to recommend the usual government sharing of 60 per cent of a maximum amount of $1,250,000 . . .

"At the equivalent of $50,000 per acre, this is more than three times the appraised value and the price paid by the present owners.

"This proposal would involve negotiations with the owners in order to try to persuade them to accept a substantially lower price since any costs in excess of $1,250,000 would be 100 per cent the responsibility of your Regional Hospital District."

In his reply, Wallace said the commission felt obliged to review in detail its list of potential hospital sites in the district and has concluded again that the McKenzie-Douglas site is the best one for the new hospital.

Having settled that at a special meeting last week, "we now take this opportunity of making you aware of the commission's completely positive support of the McKenzie-Douglas site (and) request that you take appropriate action to expropriate this property at a fair and equitable price so that both the province and the region can share the capital cost on the usual 60-40 basis . . ."

Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board and a member of the commission, said today the commission is pleased with McClelland's positive approach, even though there is disagreement on the question of the land's value.

"We also believe the price is too high and the only way to resolve it now is ask the government to exprorpriate the land for a hospital site."

The difference in price turns on different appraisals conducted by province and region.

Gov't Halts Cass-Beggs' Pension

Pension plans of $10,000 a year for life arranged by the NDP for two former B.C. Hydro executives have been suspended by the Social Credit government.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said pension schemes established for former Hydro chairman Dayid Cass-Beggs and former executive director Jim Wilson are being studied by the government and will be suspended until a decision has been made.

An order to suspend payment on the pensions which began from the time the men left Hydro, went out "a few days ago," Gardom said.

Other contracts with pension agreements, arranged by the former government, are also being looked at by the new government, he said.

He would not elaborate any further on those contracts except to say they are beyond arrangements made within the public service.

The pensions were financed entirely by Hydro and go to the executive's wives if the men predecease them.

Cass-Beggs left Hydro last year and Wilson's employment was terminated by the Socred's last month so both men are received their pensions.

Former Resources Minister Bob Williams, who was a Hydro director under the NDP, said the pensions are "certainly higher than any average-Joe situation" but are not unusual for a corporation the size of Hydro.

Asked if it was a secret pension scheme, Williams said the order-in-council appointing the men in the fall of 1972 stipulated that pension plans would be arranged.

Cass-Beggs officially took over as chairman Jan. 1, 1973, and Wilson joined Hydro the same day but became executive director May 1, 1973. Their salaries were $48,000 and $38,000 respectively.

The pension schemes were formally drawn up in February, 1975, and terms of the agreements make them irrevocable.

Asked about other pension schemes at Hydro, Williams said there were some similar arrangements made when Hydro first started for executives who would not have normally received good pensions through regular channels.

Cass-Beggs is already at retirement age and Williams said Wilson is in his "mid-50s".

Premier Bennett and new Hydro chairman Bob Bonner could not be reached for comment on the pensions today.

Hydro chairman Bob Bonner described the pension arrangements as "unique" but said he wouldn't want to attach any other adjectives in his comments.

He said such schemes are not unusual in private business but these plans would probably be "exceptional" even in the private sector.

The contracts are fully entered into, he said, and he has no grounds to change them.

Trusts were set up last year from which the pensions are to be drawn.

Bennett's TV Speech Set Friday

Premier Bennett's state of the province message has now been tentatively scheduled for Friday evening.

Bennett's aides said the studios of BCTV in Vancouver have been reserved Friday afternoon for taping of the 15-minute message.

It will be shown at 6:30 p.m. on BCTV and likely again at 7 p.m. on CBC.

The address has an "on-again, off-again" history. It was originally schedule Monday, then changed tto Thursday.

Aides say it is unlikely that the date will be changed again since the Clarkson Gordon financial review should be prepared by that time. The auditors' report was originally to be the basis of the address but has since been played down. Bennett said it will now be only a minor part of his speech.

A producer may be hired by the government to help package the address.

It appears the premier will not be available for comment on his speech until three days later.

B.C. Pleads On Pulp Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams has asked Jean-Luc Pepin, Anti-Inflation Board chairman, not to roll back the pulp and paper settlement in British Columbia even though it exceeds federal guidelines.

Contents of a telegram sent Jan. 29 were made public Monday.

Williams told Pepin that "any action which would undo the results of this bargaining (in the pulp industry) would have most serious and far-reaching implications."

He said: "From the perspective of the government and the public interest it is imperative that industrial strife be reduced in this most important industry . . . I believe it would be in the public interest therefore if the most favorable consideration could be given to the subbmissions presented to you by management and labor on this settlement."

The industry and the two pulp unions — the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) — are awaiting a decision from the board that will not likely be made before next week.

The settlement in B.C. is for 16.1 per cent in the first year and 10.9 per cent in the second year, based on the calculation formula required by the Anti-Inflation Board.

Art Gruntman, CPU spokesman, said Williams' telegram was no surprise because "it is in his interest to try and get the thing settled."

Paris Recognizes MPLA Gov't

Times News Services

France today recognized the government of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA), the French foreign ministry announced.

France is the first major Western country to recognize the Luanda government of Dr. Agostinho Neto.

A foreign ministry statement said; "The French government, in conformity with its normal practice regarding the recognition of states and considering that the Luanda government today exercises authority over most of the territory, recognizes the Popular Republic of Angola."

The French decision came after it consulted with its eight European EconomicCommunity (EEC) partners on the issue.

The five Nordic countries, including EEC-member Denmark, were expected to recognize the MPLA administration Wednesday.

Luanda radio, broadcasting from the Marxist-controlled capital, said Monday the MPLA has captured the northern town of Sao Salvador, last key base of the pro-western National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

"The entire northern border (is) coming progressively under our control . . . On the southern front, the situation continues to develop in favor of the Liberation forces," the broadcast said.

The radio said a number of unidentified foreign mercenaries died in the battle for Sao Salvador, about 40 miles south of the Zaire border.

The Popular Movement's victories last week gained it recognition by the 46-member organization of African unity, followed by membership in the all-African body.

Big Fine Urged For Ouellet

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown has asked Quebec Court of Appeal to impose a "substantial fine" or a three-month prison term on federal Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet for his conviction last month on a charge of contempt of court.

Richard Holden, special prosecutor in the minister's trial, filed a motion with the appeal court Monday, asking for the fine and calling for the prison term if the fine is not paid.

Ouellet was convicted of contempt of court for comments he made Dec. 19, about Justice Kenneth Mackay's acquittal of three large sugar companies on charges of price-fixing.

He has appealed both the sentence and the verdict.

Mr. Justice James Hugessen sentenced the minister in Superior Court Jan. 23, to make full apology to the court, to Mr. Justice Mackay and to the Canadian people.

B.C. Hydro Lays Off 300; Slashes $100M Spending

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro has cut almost $100 million from its planned capital expenditures for next year, and has laid off 300 temporary employees, chairman Robert Bonner said Monday, in a letter to employees and in an interview.

Bonner said the company was faced with a loss of $35 mlilion and was attempting to fight mounting costs and financial losses with the move. He also said consideration of increased rates for electric, gas and transit service will begin soon.

He said the $35-million deficit was expected by the end of the current fiscal year ending March 31, and "if costs are not brought under control, and if revenues are not increased, we are facing a doubled deficit by the end of the next fiscal year at March 31, 1977."

The letter to Hydro employees said: "Our first priority, therefore, must be to reduce operating and capital costs substantially without reducing the reliability and quality of service to our customers. To do so, we are examining all capital projects in detail to determine the feasibility of deferring projects and, at the same time, we are studying all opportunities to reduce operating costs by modifying or cancelling functions which are discretionary."

Bonner said cost control was the first problem to be solved because "there is a limit . . . to what the public should be asked to bear" in restoring Hydro's financial health.

He said it is possible the company will lose money on its gas and electrical operations. Previously, it had been expected that the loss would result only from the expanded transit services in Vancouver and Victoria.

"We are within days of rate making (for services) because we have to determine our position in order to shape the next fiscal year," said Bonner.

Trident Tripled?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Douglass, a member of the Pacific Life Community, a Vancouver-based anti-Trident group, said Monday the United States has decided to triple the number of Trident nuclear submarines to operate out of Bangor, Wash.

He said the fleet will have destructive power of more than 12,000 nuclear warheads. The base being built at Bangor is about 100 miles south of Vancouver.

"For political and budgetary reasons, they haven't revealed the true size of the Trident fleet now," said Douglass.

MP Urges New Food Freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — A New Democratic Party MP called Monday for a freeze on retail food prices until the government has investigated a report that food prices are higher than necessary due to declining competition among supermarket chains.

Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville) made the proposal following publication of details of a food prices review board study which said Canadians are paying an average of four per cent too much for food because of falling competition.

Earlier, a spokesman for the food prices review board — which was absorbed by the anti-inflation board last October 8 said the findings of the study are "highly suspect."

James McGrath (PC — St. John's East) also called for an investigation and said the Commons should instruct the anti-inflation board to roll back prices if the report is found to be correct.

However, both MPs failed to get the unanimous corsent required for a Commons debate on their motions.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told McGrath that the anti-inflation board will pay close attention to the gross profits of supermarkets in monitoring their pricing policies under the pay and price controls program.

He also said the government will introduce "at an early date" the planned competition legislation dealing with monopolies and mergers.

McGrath said the findings of the study commissioned by the now-defunct food prices review board are seriously undermining the anti-inflation program.

Earlier, food board secretary Anthony Campbell said the study — done by Montreal marketing expert Bruce Mallen at a cost of $25,000 — attributes 3.2 per cent of unnecessary food costs to excess capacity in supermarkets.

IT'S AN ECONOMY DRIVE

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal energy department spent about $20,000 today, hoping to show Canadians they can save money and energy by driving smaller and lighter cars.

To make its point, the department sent three 1976 cars — weighing 2,400, 3,600 and 4,800 pounds respectively — on the 120-mile trip to Montreal with only four gallons of gasoline each.

Straiton said the results of the trip, which began on Parliament Hill, will be condensed to a one-minute television commercial urging Canadians to drive smaller cars.

"Because the National Film Board is doing the commercial it will cost only about $20,000, which is about half the normal cost," Straiton said.

He said experts predicts that the heaviest car will run out of gasoline before it reaches the Ontario-Quebec border — about 65 miles, that the medium-weight car will make it to Montreal Island — about 110 miles, and the smallest and lightest car will breeze through Montreal.

TOWN TALK

Just before the demonstration was to start, guards called in a tow truck to remove a luxurious, midnight blue Cadillac parked in the driveway in front of the Legislative Buildings.

Security officials apparently felt the Caddy might prove too tempting to the mostly under-25 crowd protesting the doubling and in some case tripling of insurance premiums.

Perhaps it wasn't just the opulence of the car the guards were thinking of — on its bumper, evident as it disappeared out of sight behind the tow truck, was a sticker reading Social Credit Party of B.C.

It's only eight years to 1984 when the Big Brother society predicted by George Orwell will be upon us. But maybe that fateful day has already arrived.

At the same demonstratin Friday the eyes and camera lens of the law were on the protesters who were organized by the B.C. Federation of Labor and Concerned Citizens of B.C.

It was an ironic choice to send Braiden for he's also head of the city policemen't union. He was placed in the position of having to spy on his "brothers" in the union movement.

He says demonstrations are "always cause for concern" and police "want to know what transpires."

"It's the same as any investigative practice," he adds, without saying who the complainant was or why a peaceful demonstration needs to be investigated.

What happens to the pictures?

And you'll have to draw your own conclusions as to just what that means.

HUMPHREYS

You're wondering why Victoria Symphony concert master Sydney Humphreys had two violins on stage with him at Sunday's and Monday's concerts?

No, nothing was in danger of breaking down an no, he wasn't testing.

For the violin solo passages in the second movement of the Mahler fourth symphony, the composer specifically directed that the instrument should be tuned a full tone higher than normal.

The students had set out to learn the letter "h" and in the course of the trip they visited the Strathcona Hotel.

After the picture appeared Colleen got a phone call from a woman who shouted that she had no right to be a teacher, was not fit to teach children and had no respect for the value of property — all because she allowed one of her students to bounce on the bed.

Coleen said it was explained to all the kids that the bouncing was only allowed for the special purpose of a picture. The small boy who bounced had his shoes off and didn't hurt anything.

Coleen finally hung up the phone when the caller started to swear at her.

And Times city editor Lon Wood had a call from a child psychologist who berated him for 15 minutes for allowing such a picture to get into the paper.

"Why is the Pizza Pieman making such a great offer?" said the ad in last Saturday's Times. "Because he's proud of his two restaurants and wants you to join in the family fun," was the reply.

The reassurance apparently convinced at least some readers who wondered if the offer was too good to be true.

It contained two cut-out coupons, prominently labelled $4.95, with the wording on each stating: "This coupon good for" either a pizza or spaghetti dinner for two, including green salad and garlic toast with the latter plus free beverage.

Trouble was, someone in the advertising agency, Truman Glover Advertising, had left two important little words out of the ad. It should have read something like: "This coupon and $4.95 good for . . ."

Pizza Pieman manager Bob Darnell says the error was spotted almost immediately, and steps taken to correct it before its next appearance in Sunday's Colonist.

But meanwhile several hungry people has turned up at the restaurants in the Town and Country shopping centre and James Bay, coupon in hand.

He said in-store signs had been erected to try to save any misunderstandings, and waitresses were instructed to warn customers before they ordered that the coupon's wording was misleading.

"I don't know about the legality, but that was the approach I had taken," he added. A retraction ad is to be published Wednesday, the day before the offer expires.

Most customers accepted the explanation, said Darnell, but one male pizza lover "took considerable exception" and wanted to argue the point at length.

"The whole thing caused us an awful lot of ill will, frustration and confusion," he admitted.

Price Watch Sought

Trustee Peter Bunn wants the school board to set up a special committee to monitor prices of goods and services paid for by the board.

In a notice of motion at Monday's meeting, Bunn said it is "desirable and feasible" that a monitoring committee be established.

Those goods and services judged in excess of realistic prices, especially in light of federal guidelines, would be reported to the board for action.

Notice of motion will be discussed fully at next month's board meeting, along with several motions by other trustees, including:

—That a committee be set up to study future staffing requirements in light of economic restraints, put forward by Trustee Susan Brice;

Crabfest In U.S. Pinches Island Exports

Huge catches of Dungeness crab being caught off California, Oregon and Washington are hurting the Vancouver Island crab export industry.

A spokesman for Dennis Shellfish Co. Ltd. of Victoria said the American boom has depressed the market, bringing prices down in the export trade. Locally, whole crabs are selling for $1.29 a pound.

The spokesman said it just isn't worthwhile trying to compete in the American market.

"We are told by our people in Seattle that, adding freight costs, there is no way we can stay competitive," he said.

Dungeness crab is a year-round fishery in Canada but, because of poor stocks in the past, the American season begins in December, ending in early summer.

Some American crabmen are disguntled because wholesalers are putting daily and weekly limits on the amounts they buy because they say it's all the market can absorb.

★

Both the Dennis Shellfish spokesman and federal fisheries officer Lloyd Gudewill attribute the huge American catches to crab migrations.

The Dennis Shellfish spokesman said the Alaskan King crab also follows the migration pattern.

"They move in what are called pods," he said. "A pod can be 40 feet wide and 20 feet deep. They mass close together, probably for protection."

Although Canadian catches are lean in comparison with the American ones, Gudewill says there have been similar bonanzas here.

"About 10 to 15 years ago, probably more like 15, draggers were bringing them in by the ton; most of them were taken off Long Beach (on the west coast of Vancouver Island)", he recalled.

Mayor Fears 'Barkerville' If Fire Standards Enforced

By PAUL MOSS
Times Staff

City aldermen expressed concern today that Victoria could face a housing crisis of major proportions through rigid enforcement of fire safety standards in the 1975 National Building Code.

Unless Attorney-General Garde Gardom instructs the provincial fire marshal to allow municipal fire chiefs more discretion in ordering provements to older buildings, thousands of tenants could find themselves out on the streets, they said.

Commented Mayor Mike Young: "I think it would be fair to say that this has the potential of making downtown Victoria a 20th century Barkerville."

He added: "It makes it almost necessary to recall some of our tents from Guatemala."

The discussion arose from a report by Fire Chief Eric Simmons that fire marshal Henry K. Jenns in Vancouver, had quashed an appeal by a local hotel owner against an order to upgrade his building to meet fire safety standards.

The ruling supports an earlier order issued by Simmons, who said he is under instructions to withhold the name of the owner concerned.

The owner must comply with the order delivered today by March 31, or he has the right to launch a further appeal to the county court.

Unless the eight ordered improvements to the building, including structural alterations and installation of fire detection equipment, have been implemented by the March 31 deadline, the owner will be taken to court.

A further 11 owners of downtown apartments and hotels who have also appealed their upgrading orders will be handled individually by the fire marshal, Simmons said.

In all, 30 such orders were issued by his department. The first 26 of these involved a total of 947 tenants.

'Put 1,000 on the Street'

Ald. Bob Wright was shocked to learn how many low-income renters could be displaced, if the building owners concerned decided that the ordered improvements would be too costly.

"It's absolutely ridiculous when we already have a housing crisis in Victoria that these people can turn around, look at a regulation book and some bureaucrat can interpret the regulations to put 1,000 people on the street," he said.

"I don't understand how it got to this point where we can even consider such a thing . . . these people have lived in these buildings for 40 years and they are still alive."

Housing committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier pointed out that the total effect on the city's housing stock would be far-reaching, because the regulations can be applied to every type of housing down to duplex level.

He noted that with the 1975 building code used as the standard, even relatively modern apartment buildings like the Lord Simcoe in James Bay do not conform. In some cases the cost of carrying out the safety measures could amount to $25 per square foot.

Glazier said the city's hands are tied, for Simmons is the fire marshal's deputy and he has no option but to enforce the regulations.

The fire marshal's latest ruling had removed the hope that some compromise could be reached in the case of older buildings, by allowing the owners to install sprinkler systems — a measure which Vancouver had adopted.

Ald. Alf Hood said last fall former mayor Peter Pollen and the fire chief had tried to express the city's concerns to the assistant deputy attorney-general, who had promised to review the situation.

But the quashed appeal indicates that nothing came of that investigation.

On Young's suggestion, the committee instructed city manager Jim Bramley to prepare a brief outlining the total extent of the problem, which can form the basis for discussions with the cabinet ministers.

Strike Favored at Inn

The 72-hour strike notice will be served on inn management by Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union either later today or Wednesday, union business agent Tony Gerussi said today.

Provincial mediator Ken Albertini is still involved in negotiation efforts at the inn and strike action is prohibited until Albertini files his final report with the provincial labor department.

The previous contract, covering the 20 employees, expired Dec. 31 and the union wants the new contract to run only until April 30, the expiry date of other hotel and restaurant contracts in the Victoria area.

The union is seeking a 15 cents an hour increase on the base rate of $3.13 an hour.

Beery 'Mutt and Jeff' Rob City Drug Store

Two men wearing baseball caps and nylon pantyhose over their faces — "and reeking of beer" — held up the James Bay United Pharmacy, 230 Menzies, Monday and escaped with $325.

The men, described by Victoria police as a "Mutt and Jeff" team, entered the store at 5:45 p.m. just 15 minutes before closing time, approached clerk Ruth Ridley and demanded money from the till.

Ms. Ridley said today the smaller of the two had his arm inside in his jacket as if simulating a weapon and waved it at her.

She said she tried to stall, but the gunman poked his arm towards her and said gruffly: "Hurry up lady."

She said the two "reeked of beer" but weren't drunk.

"They were belligerent, mean and I think also very scared."

She handed the money in the cash drawer and the men told her to get the "big bills" under the coin tray. She did but stalled while she separated the cheques from the money.

The taller of the two grew impatient, grabbed the bills from her hand and the pair fled.

During the holdup assistant pharmacist Colleen Hicks in a back room saw what was going on and started to phone police. But the men spotted her and ordefed her up to the front counter before she could complete dialing.

Pharmacist Gerry Lundgren said he was at the back of the store during the holdup.

He said shortly before the holdup he had received two or three telephone calls from a man wanting to know when the pharmacy closed for the night.

"It was unusual to get that number," Lundgren said. "I think one of the men was probably checking us out."

Cabinet Approves Salt Spring Thaw

A subdivision by law on Salt Spring Island passed earlier by the Capital Regional Board has been given cabinet approval, effectively lifting the former 10-acre minimum, board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

"The bylaw permits implementation of the first stage of the Salt Spring Island community plan," he said. "And the purpose of the plan is to ensure a rational and acceptable level of development on the island."

He said one of the interesting aspects of the bylaw is that it allows subdivisions on average-sized lots instead of minimum size lots.

"This means in many instances the average size lot will be five acres or even more," he said. "At the same time it allows for smaller lots which will be within the means of the average person."

He conceded that not all residents are pleased with the bylaw and would have preferred the freeze to remain.

"But it is a step forward and most people are in favor of it," he said.

388-3711 For Price Complaints

The Anti-Inflation Board hot line was a little hotter than expected this morning until somebody figured out it was a wrong number.

The number appearing in Victoria newspapers this week was something else.

In fact it was the number for the reserve training section of CFB Esquimalt. The girls at that number were a little confused as to why they were receiving so many calls about high prices in Victoria until they figured out it was a wrong number.

Gas-Saver Didn't Do Job, Court Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

An expert witness in engine testing told Victoria county court Monday he could not substantiate claims of increased horsepower and gasoline mileage after installation of an air induction valve called Ball-Matic.

Martin Friend, a technical officer at the National Research Council in Ottawa and in charge of its fuels and lubricants laboratory and engine testing section, was testifying in the trial of Glen Edward Clarke, 1331 Vining.

Clarke, carrying on business as Turbo Sales, is accused under a section of the Combines Investigation Act dealing with false advertising of making statements in April, 1974, which "purported to be statements of fact but were untrue."

The indictment alleges the statements were made in a weekly entertainment magazine This Week, with a circulation of 215,000, to promote the sale of Ball-Matic Air Injectors.

The statements recorded in the indictment are:

1. "Increase horsepower . . . Gas Mileage."

2. "Makes your carburetor breathe deeper . . . use more air, less gas."

3. "Now — you can enjoy a marvellous new kind of power — astonishing pep — Get Up and Go and save money too."

Michael John Poulton, first witness in the two-day trial, said he responded to the advertisement and received an air injector for which he paid $18.90, covering purchase price and sales tax.

Poulton, an investigator with the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department, sent the device to the mechanical engineering division of the National Research Council for tests.

Friend, who made the tests, said the device had "no significant effect on the manifold vacuum" and "only insignificant effect" on fuel flow.

He said the Ball-Matic Air Injector was, technically, not an injector but an induction valve.

Fitted in the carburetor of an engine, it is supposed to increase the air supply at higher speeds as the manifold vacuum decreases. It consists of a chamber with a plastic ball which covers an opening.

He contrasted the device to a supercharger, which, he said, together with other necessary modifications to an engine, would cost $600 to $800.

He said he would not expect the Ball-Matic to make any difference because the amount of air induced would be small compared with normal air flow.

"If it sucked a vast amount of air you would see a change in engine operation immediately," he told Judge Montague Drake.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Friend agreed he wasn't given information on the kind of car for which the device was ordered, a 1966 Pontiac. The test was done on a 1961 283-cubic-inch V-8 General Motors engine.

He agreed he had done tests on a device called Mini Turbo Charger, used for the same purpose, and that he drew essentially the same conclusions.

But, he said, he made no direct comparisons between the two.

Asked about tests done by an American company called Fema Corporation which claimed the Mini could produce 16.7 per cent more miles to a gallon of gas, Friend said he disputed the manner in which those tests were conducted and did not consider them adequate for a comparative test.

'Reluctant' Approval For New Hospital Site

By DON VIPOND
Times Staff

Health Minister Bob McClelland has "reluctantly" agreed to purchase of a 25-acre site near Douglas and McKenzie for a new hospital and regional planners have asked him to expropriate the land.

But McClelland says that if the regional Hospital and Health Planning Commission is determined on that site, he won't support provincial cost-sharing beyond $1.25-million, half the price the owners want and the region says the land is worth.

That would mean ratepayers in the Capital district could have to pay substantially more to finance the purchase.

The commission has countered by asking for provincial government expropriation of the property. This would lead to an independent board setting a fair market value, one the commission says the province and region could then share on the customary 60-40 formula.

The site lies northeast of the McKenzie-Douglas intersection on sloping land now within the Agricultural Land Reserve but surrounded by residential development and within the Saanich sewer enterprise.

Settling on a site for the planned acute care hospital, initially to have 300 beds, is a key planning decision which is currently delaying a number of other hospital plans.

The commission released copies of the letters today. McClelland is out of town and could not be reached for comment.

In his letter, the health minister repeated his concern about the cost of the property, earlier put at about $2.5 million by the region.

"I do not believe that I should encourage you to proceed with this proposed site acquisition at what appears to be an unreasonable price during this difficult period of financial restraint," he says in part.

But he adds:

"In the event that your commision insists you are so deeply 'locked into' the McKenzie-Douglas site that you feel you cannot change your recommendation, I reluctantly make the following proposal.

"I would be prepared to recommend the usual government sharing of 60 per cent of a maximum amount of $1,250,000 . . .

"At the equivalent of $50,000 per acre, this is more than three times the appraised value and the price paid by the present owners.

"This proposal would involve negotiations with the owners in order to try to persuade them to accept a substantially lower price since any costs in excess of $1,250,000 would be 100 per cent the responsibility of your Regional Hospital District."

In his reply, Wallace said the commission felt obliged to review in detail its list of potential hospital sites in the district and has concluded again that the McKenzie-Douglas site is the best one for the new hospital.

Having settled that at a special meeting last week, "we now take this opportunity of making you aware of the commission's completely positive support of the McKenzie-Douglas site (and) request that you take appropriate action to expropriate this property at a fair and equitable price so that both the province and the region can share the capital cost on the usual 60-40 basis . . ."

Art Young, chairman of the regional hospital board and a member of the commission, said today the commission is pleased with McClelland's positive approach, even though there is disagreement on the question of the land's value.

"We also believe the price is too high and the only way to resolve it now is ask the government to exprorpriate the land for a hospital site."

The difference in price turns on different appraisals conducted by province and region.

Gov't Halts Cass-Beggs' Pension

Pension plans of $10,000 a year for life arranged by the NDP for two former B.C. Hydro executives have been suspended by the Social Credit government.

Attorney-General Garde Gardom said pension schemes established for former Hydro chairman David Cass-Beggs and former executive director Jim Wilson are being studied by the government and will be suspended until a decision has been made.

An order to suspend payment on the pensions which began from the time the men left Hydro, went out "a few days ago," Gardom said.

Other contracts with pension agreements, arranged by the former government, are also being looked at by the new government, he said.

He would not elaborate any further on those contracts except to say they are beyond arrangements made within the public service.

The pensions were financed entirely by Hydro and go to the executive's wives if the men predecease them.

Former Resources Minister Bob Williams, who was a Hydro director under the NDP, said the pensions are "certainly higher than any average-Joe situation" but are not unusual for a corporation the size of Hydro.

Asked if it was a secret pension scheme, Williams said the order-in-council appointing the men in the fall of 1972 stipulated that pension plans would be arranged.

Cass-Beggs officially took over as chairman Jan. 1, 1973, and Wilson joined Hydro the same day but became executive director May 1, 1973. Their salaries were $48,000 and $38,000 respectively.

The pension schemes were formally drawn up in February, 1975, and terms of the agreements make them irrevocable.

Asked about other pension schemes at Hydro, Williams said there were some similar arrangements made when Hydro first started for executives who would not have normally received good pensions through regular channels.

Cass-Beggs is already at retirement age and Williams said Wilson is in his "mid-50s".

Hydro chairman Bob Bonner described the pension arrangements as "unique" but said he wouldn't want to attach any other adjectives in his comments.

He said such schemes are not unusual in private business but these plans would probably be "exceptional" even in the private sector.

The confracts are fully entered into, he said, and he has no grounds to change them.

Trusts were set up last year from which the pensions are to be drawn.

Bennett's TV Speech Set Friday

Premier Bennett's state of the province message has now been tentatively scheduled for Friday evening.

Bennett's aides said the studios of BCTV in Vancouver have been reserved Friday afternoon for taping of the 15-minute message.

It will be shown at 6:30 p.m. on BCTV and likely again at 7 p.m. on CBC.

The address has an "on-again, off-again" history. It was originally scheduled Monday, then changed to Thursday.

Aides say it is unlikely that the date will be changed again since the Clarkson Gordon financial review should be prepared by that time. The auditors' report was originally to be the basis of the address but has since been played down. Bennett said it will now be only a minor part of his speech.

A producer may be hired by the government to help package the address.

It appears the premier will not be available for comment on his speech until three days later.

B.C. Pleads On Pulp Pact

VANCOUVER (CP) — Labor Minister Allan Williams has asked Jean-Luc Pepin, Anti-Inflation Board chairman, not to roll back the pulp and paper settlement in British Columbia even though it exceeds federal guidelines.

Contents of a telegram sent Jan. 29 were made public Monday.

Williams told Pepin that "any action which would undo the results of this bargaining (in the pulp industry) would have most serious and far-reaching implications."

He said: "From the perspective of the government and the public interest it is imperative that industrial strife be reduced in this most important industry . . . I believe it would be in the public interest therefore if the most favorable consideration could be given to the submissions presented to you by management and labor on this settlement."

The industry and the two pulp unions — the Pulp, Paper and Woodworkers of Canada (PPWC) and the Canadian Paperworkers Union (CPU) — are awaiting a decision from the board that will not likely be made before next week.

The settlement in B.C. is for 16.1 per cent in the first year and 10.9 per cent in the second year, based on the calculation formula required by the Anti-Inflation Board.

Paris Recognizes MPLA Gov't

Times News Services

France today recognized the government of the Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola (MPLA), the French foreign ministry announced.

France is the first major Western country to recognize the Luanda government of Dr. Agostinho Neto.

A foreign ministry statement said: "The French government, in conformity with its normal practice regarding the recognition of states and considering that the Luanda government today exercises authority over most of the territory, recognizes the Popular Republic of Angola."

The French decision came after it consulted with its eight European Economic Community (EEC) partners on the issue.

The five Nordic countries, including EEC-member Denmark, were expected to recognize the MPLA administration Wednesday.

Luanda radio, broadcasting from the Marxist-controlled capital, said Monday the MPLA has captured the northern town of Sao Salvador, last key base of the pro-western National Front for the Liberation of Angola.

"The entire northern border (is) coming progressively under our control . . . On the southern front, the situation continues to develop in favor of the Liberation forces," the broadcast said.

The radio said a number of unidentified foreign mercenaries died in the battle for Sao Salvador, about 40 miles south of the Zaire border.

The Popular Movement's victories last week gained it recognition by the 46-member organization of African unity, followed by membership in the all-African body.

Big Fine Urged For Ouellet

MONTREAL (CP) — The Crown has asked Quebec Court of Appeal to impose a "substantial fine" or a three-month prison term on federal Consumer and Corporate Affairs Minister Andre Ouellet for his conviction last month on a charge of contempt of court.

Richard Holden, special prosecutor in the minister's trial, filed a motion with the appeal court Monday, asking for the fine and calling for the prison term if the fine is not paid.

Ouellet was convicted of contempt of court for comments he made Dec. 19, about Justice Kenneth Mackay's acquittal of three large sugar companies on charges of price-fixing.

He has appealed both the sentence and the verdict.

Mr. Justice James Hugessen sentenced the minister in Superior Court Jan. 23, to make full apology to the court, to Mr. Justice Mackay and to the Canadian people.

B.C. Hydro Lays Off 300; Slashes $100M Spending

VANCOUVER (CP) — B.C. Hydro has cut almost $100 million from its planned capital expenditures for next year, and has laid off 300 temporary employees, chairman Robert Bonner said Monday, in a letter to employees and in an interview.

Bonner said the company was faced with a loss of $35 million and was attempting to fight mounting costs and financial losses with the move. He also said consideration of increased rates for electric, gas and transit service will begin soon.

He said the $35-million deficit was expected by the end of the current fiscal year ending March 31, and "if costs are not brought under control, and if revenues are not increased, we are facing a doubled deficit by the end of the next fiscal year at March 31, 1977."

The letter to Hydro employees said: "Our first priority, therefore, must be to reduce operating and capital costs substantially without reducing the reliability and quality of service to our customers. To do so, we are examining all capital projects in detail to determine the feasibility of deferring projects and, at the same time, we are studying all opportunities to reduce operating costs by modifying or cancelling functions which are discretionary."

Bonner said cost control was the first problem to be solved because "there is a limit . . . to what the public should be asked to bear" in restoring Hydro's financial health.

He said it is possible the company will lose money on its gas and electrical operations. Previously, it had been expected that the loss would result only from the expanded transit services in Vancouver and Victoria.

"We are within days of rate making (for services) because we have to determine our position in order to shape the next fiscal year," said Bonner.

Trident Tripled?

VANCOUVER (CP) — Jim Douglass, a member of the Pacific Life Community, a Vancouver-based anti-Trident group, said Monday the United States has decided to triple the number of Trident nuclear submarines to operate out of Bangor, Wash.

He said the fleet will have destructive power of more than 12,000 nuclear warheads. The base being built at Bangor is about 100 miles south of Vancouver.

"For political and budgetary reasons, they haven't revealed the true size of the Trident fleet now," said Douglass.

MP Urges New Food Freeze

OTTAWA (CP) — A New Democratic Party MP called Monday for a freeze on retail food prices until the government has investigated a report that food prices are higher than necessary due to declining competition among supermarket chains.

Lorne Nystrom (Yorkton-Melville) made the proposal following publication of details of a food prices review board study which said Canadians are paying an average of four per cent too much for food because of falling competition.

Earlier, a spokesman for the food prices review board — which was absorbed by the anti-inflation board last October 8 said the findings of the study are "highly suspect."

James McGrath (PC — St. John's East) also called for an investigation and said the Commons should instruct the anti-inflation board to roll back prices if the report is found to be correct.

Finance Minister Donald Macdonald told McGrath that the anti-inflation board will pay close attention to the gross profits of supermarkets in monitoring their pricing policies under the pay and price controls program.

He also said the government will introduce "at an early date" the planned competition legislation dealing with monopolies and mergers.

McGrath said the findings of the study commissioned by the now-defunct food prices review board are seriously undermining the anti-inflation program.

Earlier, food board secretary Anthony Campbell said the study — done by Montreal marketing expert Bruce Mallen at a cost of $25,000 — attributes 3.2 per cent of unnecessary food costs to excess capacity in supermarkets.

IT'S AN ECONOMY DRIVE

OTTAWA (CP) — The federal energy department spent about $20,000 today, hoping to show Canadians they can save money and energy by driving smaller and lighter cars.

To make its point, the department sent three 1976 cars — weighing 2,400, 3,600 and 4,800 pounds respectively — on the 120-mile trip to Montreal with only four gallons of gasoline each.

A spokesman said the results of the trip, which began on Parliament Hill, will be condensed to a one-minute television commercial urging Canadians to drive smaller cars.

"Because the National Film Board is doing the commercial it will cost only about $20,000, which is about half the normal cost," he said.

He said experts predicts that the heaviest car will run out of gasoline before it reaches the Ontario-Quebec border — about 65 miles, that the medium-weight car will make it to Montreal Island — about 110 miles, and the smallest and lightest car will breeze through Montreal.

Just before the demonstration was to start, guards called in a tow truck to remove a luxurious, midnight blue Cadillac parked in the driveway in front of the Legislative Buildings.

Security officials apparently felt the Caddy might prove too tempting to the mostly under-25 crowd protesting the doubling and in some case tripling of insurance premiums.

Perhaps it wasn't just the opulence of the car the guards were thinking of — on its bumper, evident as it disappeared out of sight behind the tow truck, was a sticker reading Social Credit Party of B.C.

It's only eight years to 1984 when the Big Brother society predicted by George Orwell will be upon us. But maybe that fateful day has already arrived.

At the same demonstration Friday the eyes and camera lens of the law were on the protesters who were organized by the B.C. Federation of Labor and Concerned Citizens of B.C.

It was an ironic choice to send Braiden for he's also head of the city policemen's union. He was placed in the position of having to spy on his "brothers" in the union movement.

He says demonstrations are "always cause for concern" and police "want to know what transpires."

"It's the same as any investigative practice," he adds, without saying who the complainant was or why a peaceful demonstration needs to be investigated.

What happens to the pictures?

"They're held for police purposes," says Mottershead.

And you'll have to draw your own conclusions as to just what that means.

HUMPHREYS
. . . all systems go

You're wondering why Victoria Symphony concert master Sydney Humphreys had two violins on stage with him at Sunday's and Monday's concerts?

No, nothing was in danger of breaking down and no, he wasn't testing.

For the violin solo passages in the second movement of the Mahler fourth symphony, the composer specifically directed that the instrument should be tuned a full tone higher than normal.

The scherzo's theme — death strikes up a tune — is treated humorously by Mahler who desired a thin, eerie solo sound.

Obviously it is impossible to tune and re-tune a fiddle in full flight as it were, hence two fiddles for the concert master-soloist.

Somebody always wants to spoil the fun.

The students had set out to learn the letter "h" and in the course of the trip they visited the Strathcona Hotel.

After the picture appeared Colleen got a phone call from a woman who shouted that she had no right to be a teacher, was not fit to teach children and had no respect for the value of property — all because she allowed one of her students to bounce on the bed.

Coleen said it was explained to all the kids that the bouncing was only allowed for the special purpose of a picture. The small boy who bounced had his shoes off and didn't hurt anything.

Coleen finally hung up the phone when the caller started to swear at her.

"The thing is that the children behaved beautifully that day. We had a beautiful day," said Coleen.

Ye Gods!

There'll be no more smoke to accompany the hot air in Saanich council chamber.

The anti-smokers beat out the smokers 5-4 Monday when Ald. Roy Wootten pushed through a motion to ban smoking in the chamber.

But the smokers didn't go down without a fight.

Ald. Sandy Noel said the ban should apply throughout the hall, otherwise it was discriminating.

Ald. Fred Severson said the ban would discriminate against residents who attended council meetings and wanted to smoke.

"Why is the Pizza Pieman making such a great offer?" said the ad in last Saturday's Times. "Because he's proud of his two restaurants and wants you to join in the family fun," was the reply.

The reassurance apparently convinced at least some readers who wondered if the offer was too good to be true.

It contained two cut-out coupons, prominently labelled $4.95, with the wording on each stating: "This coupon good for" either a pizza or spaghetti dinner for two, including green salad and garlic toast with the latter plus free beverage.

Trouble was, someone in the advertising agency, Truman Glover Advertising, had left two important little words out of the ad: It should have read something like: "This coupon and $4.95 good for . . ."

Pizza Pieman manager Bob Darnell says the error was spotted almost immediately, and steps taken to correct it before its next appearance in Sunday's Colonist.

But meanwhile several hungry people had turned up at the restaurants in the Town and Country shopping centre and James Bay, coupon in hand.

He said in-store signs had been erected to try to save any misunderstandings, and waitresses were instructed to warn customers before they ordered that the coupon's wording was misleading.

"I don't know about the legality, but that was the approach I had taken," he added. A retraction ad is to be published Wednesday, the day before the offer expires.

Most customers accepted the explanation, said Darnell, but one male pizza lover "took considerable exception" and wanted to argue the point at length.

"The whole thing caused us an awful lot of ill will, frustration and confusion," he admitted.

Price Watch Sought

Trustee Peter Bunn wants the school board to set up a special committee to monitor prices of goods and services paid for by the board.

In a notice of motion at Monday's meeting, Bunn said it is "desirable and feasible" that a monitoring committee be established.

Those goods and services judged in excess of realistic prices, especially in light of federal guidelines, would be reported to the board for action.

Notice of motion will be discussed fully at next month's board meeting, along with several motions by other trustees, including:

—That a committee be set up to study future staffing requirements in light of economic restraints, put forward by Trustee Susan Brice;

Crabfest In U.S. Pinches Island Exports

Huge catches of Dungeness crab being caught off California, Oregon and Washington are hurting the Vancouver Island crab export industry.

A spokesman for Dennis Shellfish Co. Ltd. of Victoria said the American boom has depressed the market, bringing prices down in the export trade. Locally, whole crabs are selling for $1.29 a pound.

The spokesman said it just isn't worthwhile trying to compete in the American market.

"We are told by our people in Seattle that, adding freight costs, there is no way we can stay competitive," he said.

Dungeness crab is a year-round fishery in Canada but, because of poor stocks in the past, the American season begins in December, ending in early summer.

Some American crabmen are disgruntled because wholesalers are putting daily and weekly limits on the amounts they buy because they say it's all the market can absorb.

"This season has just been wild, unbelievable," says Lawrence Lazio of the Tom Lazio Fish Co. in Eureka. "Last year at this time we had less than 125,000 pounds of crab. This year, I'd estimate we've already had seven to nine million pounds. The crabs just keep marching in . . . more and more."

★

Both the Dennis Shellfish spokesman and federal fisheries officer Lloyd Gudewill attribute the huge American catches to crab migrations.

The Dennis Shellfish spokesman said the Alaskan King crab also follows the migration pattern.

"They move in what are called pods," he said. "A pod can be 40 feet wide and 20 feet deep. They mass close together, probably for protection."

Although Canadian catches are lean in comparison with the American ones, Gudewill says there have been similar bonanzas here.

"About 10 to 15 years ago, probably more like 15, draggers were bringing them in by the ton; most of them were taken off Long Beach (on the west coast of Vancouver Island)", he recalled.

Mayor Fears 'Barkerville' If Fire Standards Enforced

By PAUL MOSS

City aldermen expressed concern today that Victoria could face a housing crisis of major proportions through rigid enforcement of fire safety standards in the 1975 National Building Code.

Unless Attorney-General Garde Gardom instructs the provincial fire marshal to allow municipal fire chiefs more discretion in ordering provements to older buildings, thousands of tenants could find themselves out on the streets, they said.

Commented Mayor Mike Young: "I think it would be fair to say that this has the potential of making downtown Victoria a 20th century Barkerville."

He added: "It makes it almost necessary to recall some of our tents from Guatemala."

The discussion arose from a report by Fire Chief Eric Simmons that fire marshal Henry K. Jenns in Vancouver, had quashed an appeal by a local hotel owner against an order to upgrade his building to meet fire safety standards.

The ruling supports an earlier order issued by Simmons, who said he is under instructions to withhold the name of the owner concerned.

The owner must comply with the order delivered today by March 31, or he has the right to launch a further appeal to the county court.

Unless the eight ordered improvements to the building, including structural alterations and installation of fire detection equipment, have been implemented by the March 31 deadline, the owner will be taken to court.

A further 11 owners of downtown apartments and hotels who have also appealed their upgrading orders will be handled individually by the fire marshal, Simmons said.

In all, 30 such orders were issued by his department. The first 26 of these involved a total of 947 tenants.

'Put 1,000 on the Street'

Ald. Bob Wright was shocked to learn how many low-income renters could be displaced, if the building owners concerned decided that the ordered improvements would be too costly.

"It's absolutely ridiculous when we already have a housing crisis in Victoria that these people can turn around, look at a regulation book and some bureaucrat can interpret the regulations to put 1,000 people on the street," he said.

"I don't understand how it got to this point where we can even consider such a thing . . . these people have lived in these buildings for 40 years and they are still alive."

Housing committee chairman Ald. Murray Glazier pointed out that the total effect on the city's housing stock would be far-reaching, because the regulations can be applied to every type of housing down to duplex level.

He noted that with the 1975 building code used as the standard, even relatively modern apartment buildings like the Lord Simcoe in James Bay do not conform. In some cases the cost of carrying out the safety measures could amount to $25 per square foot.

Glazier said the city's hands are tied, for Simmons is the fire marshal's deputy and he has no option but to enforce the regulations.

The fire marshal's latest ruling had removed the hope that some compromise could be reached in the case of older buildings, by allowing the owners to install sprinkler systems — a measure which Vancouver had adopted.

Ald. Alf Hood said last fall former mayor Peter Pollen and the fire chief had tried to express the city's concerns to the assistant deputy attorney-general, who had promised to review the situation.

But the quashed appeal indicates that nothing came of that investigation.

On Young's suggestion, the committee instructed city manager Jim Bramley to prepare a brief outlining the total extent of the problem, which can form the basis for discussions with the cabinet ministers.

Strike Favored at Inn

The 72-hour strike notice will be served on inn management by Local 835 of the Beverage Dispensers and Culinary Workers Union either later today or Wednesday, union business agent Tony Gerussi said today.

Provincial mediator Ken Albertini is still involved in negotiation efforts at the inn and strike action is prohibited until Albertini files his final report with the provincial labor department.

The previous contract, covering the 20 employees, expired Dec. 31 and the union wants the new contract to run only until April 30, the expiry date of other hotel and restaurant contracts in the Victoria area.

The union is seeking a 15 cents an hour increase on the base rate of $3.13 an hour.

Beery 'Mutt and Jeff' Rob City Drug Store

Two men wearing baseball caps and nylon pantyhose over their faces — "and reeking of beer" — held up the James Bay United Pharmacy, 230 Menzies, Monday and escaped with $325.

The men, described by Victoria police as a "Mutt and Jeff" team, entered the store at 5:45 p.m. just 15 minutes before closing time, approached clerk Ruth Ridley and demanded money from the till.

Ms. Ridley said today the smaller of the two had his arm inside in his jacket as if simulating a weapon and waved it at her.

She said she tried to stall, but the gunman poked his arm towards her and said gruffly: "Hurry up lady."

She said the two "reeked of beer" but weren't drunk.

"They were belligerent, mean and I think also very scared."

She handed the money in the cash drawer and the men told her to get the "big bills" under the coin tray. She did but stalled while she separated the cheques from the money.

The taller of the two grew impatient, grabbed the bills from her hand and the pair fled.

During the holdup assistant pharmacist Colleen Hicks in a back room saw what was going on and started to phone police. But the men spotted her and ordered her up to the front counter before she could complete dialing.

Pharmacist Gerry Lundgren said he was at the back of the store during the holdup.

He said shortly before the holdup he had received two or three telephone calls from a man wanting to know when the pharmacy closed for the night.

"It was unusual to get that number," Lundgren said. "I think one of the men was probably checking us out."

Cabinet Approves Salt Spring Thaw

A subdivision bylaw on Salt Spring Island passed earlier by the Capital Regional Board has been given cabinet approval, effectively lifting the former 10-acre minimum, board chairman Jim Campbell said today.

"The bylaw permits implementation of the first stage of the Salt Spring Island community plan," he said. "And the purpose of the plan is to ensure a rational and acceptable level of development on the island."

He said one of the interesting aspects of the bylaw is that it allows subdivisions on average-sized lots instead of minimum size lots.

"This means in many instances the average size lot will be five acres or even more," he said. "At the same time it allows for smaller lots which will be within the means of the average person."

He conceded that not all residents are pleased with the bylaw and would have preferred the freeze to remain.

"But it is a step forward and most people are in favor of it," he said.

388-3711 For Price Complaints

The Anti-Inflation Board hot line was a little hotter than expected this morning until somebody figured out it was a wrong number.

The number appearing in Victoria newspapers this week was something else.

In fact it was the number for the reserve training section of CFB Esquimalt. The girls at that number were a little confused as to why they were receiving so many calls about high prices in Victoria until they figured out it was a wrong number.

Gas-Saver Didn't Do Job, Court Told

By ROGER STONEBANKS
Times Staff

An expert witness in engine testing told Victoria county court Monday he could not substantiate claims of increased horsepower and gasoline mileage after installation of an air induction valve called Ball-Matic.

Martin Friend, a technical officer at the National Research Council in Ottawa and in charge of its fuels and lubricants laboratory and engine testing section, was testifying in the trial of Glen Edward Clarke, 1331 Vining.

Clarke, carrying on business as Turbo Sales, is accused under a section of the Combines Investigation Act dealing with false advertising of making statements in April, 1974, which "purported to be statements of fact but were untrue."

The indictment alleges the statements were made in a weekly entertainment magazine This Week, with a circulation of 215,000, to promote the sale of Ball-Matic Air Injectors.

1. "Increase horsepower . . . Gas Mileage."

2. "Makes your carburetor breathe deeper . . . use more air, less gas."

3. "Now — you can enjoy a marvellous new kind of power — astonishing pep — Get Up and Go and save money too."

Michael John Poulton, first witness in the two-day trial, said he responded to the advertisement and received an air injector for which he paid $18.90, covering purchase price and sales tax.

Poulton, an investigator with the Consumer and Corporate Affairs Department, sent the device to the mechanical engineering division of the National Research Council for tests.

Friend, who made the tests, said the device had "no significant effect on the manifold vacuum" and "only insignificant effect" on fuel flow.

He said the Ball-Matic Air Injector was, technically, not an injector but an induction valve.

Fitted in the carburetor of an engine, it is supposed to increase the air supply at higher speeds as the manifold vacuum decreases. It consists of a chamber with a plastic ball which covers an opening.

He contrasted the device to a supercharger, which, he said, together with other necessary modifications to an engine, would cost $600 to $800.

He said he would not expect the Ball-Matic to make any difference because the amount of air induced would be small compared with normal air flow.

"If it sucked a vast amount of air you would see a change in engine operation immediately," he told Judge Montague Drake.

Cross-examined by defence counsel Mike Hutchison, Friend agreed he wasn't given information on the kind of car for which the device was ordered, a 1966 Pontiac. The test was done on a 1961 283-cubic-inch V-8 General Motors engine.

He agreed he had done tests on a device called Mini Turbo Charger, used for the same purpose, and that he drew essentially the same conclusions.

But, he said, he made no direct comparisons between the two.

Asked about tests done by an American company called Fema Corporation which claimed the Mini could produce 16.7 per cent more miles to a gallon of gas, Friend said he disputed the manner in which those tests were conducted and did not consider them adequate for a comparative test.
